

Riskiest Moon Expedition

Blastoff Going on Schedule

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — The countdown proceeded smoothly today as the Apollo 13 astronauts prepared for man's riskiest lunar landing expedition. John L. Swigert Jr., 38, wakened at 8:58 a.m. and received the good news that everything was on schedule for the journey away from their home planet. Swigert earned a seat on the mission Friday, less than 24 hours before scheduled lift off, after a remarkable and unprecedented rehearsal that moved him up from the backup team to replace measles-threatened Thomas K. Mattingly II. Five miles from the crew quarters, the launch crew pumped thousands of gallons of supercold liquid oxygen and liquid hydrogen into the Saturn 5 rocket that was to blast off at 2:13 p.m. EST. The astronauts had slept about eight hours. They underwent a brief medical examination and sat down to the traditional launch day breakfast of steak, eggs, toast, coffee and orange juice. The weatherman forecast a cloudy but satisfactory condition for the planned launch. The target for man's third lunar mission is the mountainous Fra Mauro region where the astronauts hope to find rocks dating perhaps five billion years to the beginning of the moon.

In the most difficult space maneuver ever attempted, Lovell and Haise are to steer their lunar lander toward a precision touchdown in a narrow valley surrounded by high hills, ridges, craters and rocks as big as automobiles.

The countdown for America's third moon-landing expedition proceeded because Swigert proved in a crash two-day trial that he could move from the Apollo 13 backup team to the first team.

The decision to fly Swigert was made less than 24 hours before the scheduled launching.

If Swigert hadn't made it, the launching would have been postponed until May 9 at a cost of at least $800,000.

He got his chance when another backup astronaut, Charles Duke, exposed the prime crewmen, Lovell, Haise and Thomas K. Mattingly II, to German measles. Because he had no immunity, Mattingly faced the danger of being disabled by the disease in space.

Lovell and Haise were immune, as was Swigert. Throughout the week, space agency officials considered postponing the mission, but decided to give Swigert a trial despite initial objections from mission commander Lovell, who wanted to keep his team intact.

Lovell, Haise and Mattingly had trained together for two years and were described as a superbly conditioned unit.

But Lovell agreed, and Swigert slipped into a spaceship simulator with Lovell and Haise on Thursday to practice critical maneuvers that require split-second timing by all three astronauts.

The suspense built Friday morning when NASA Administrator Thomas O. Paine flew to Cape Kennedy to review the training and all other aspects of the flight.

After 2½ hours, including a half-hour private meeting with Lovell, Paine gave the go-ahead to continue the mission with Swigert moving into the center couch of the command module as its pilot.

"Our first decision was that we would not let Mattingly fly," Paine reported. "The rest of the meeting was devoted to the question of whether we could sub Swigert."

The recommendation was unanimous that Swigert be permitted to fly, Paine said.

"Jim (Lovell) was particularly disappointed that Mattingly couldn't make the trip," Paine said. "Jim has a high professional regard for him, and of course it was therefore very difficult for him to accept the decision he would not be able to fly with the 13 mission after all the many months of preparation they had put in."

Later, Donald "Deke" Slayton, the astronauts' boss, said Lovell "feels very comfortable with Jack."

Slayton said that if it had been Lovell or Haise who had been susceptible to German measles instead of Mattingly, a replacement could not have been made. That is because the two moonwalkers must coordinate so closely while on the lunar surface.

While Mattingly watches from the sidelines, the new Apollo 13 prime crew will be heading for one of mankind's greatest adventures.

They are going in the name of science and they have chosen for their motto "Ex Luna, Scientia"—"From the Moon, Knowledge."

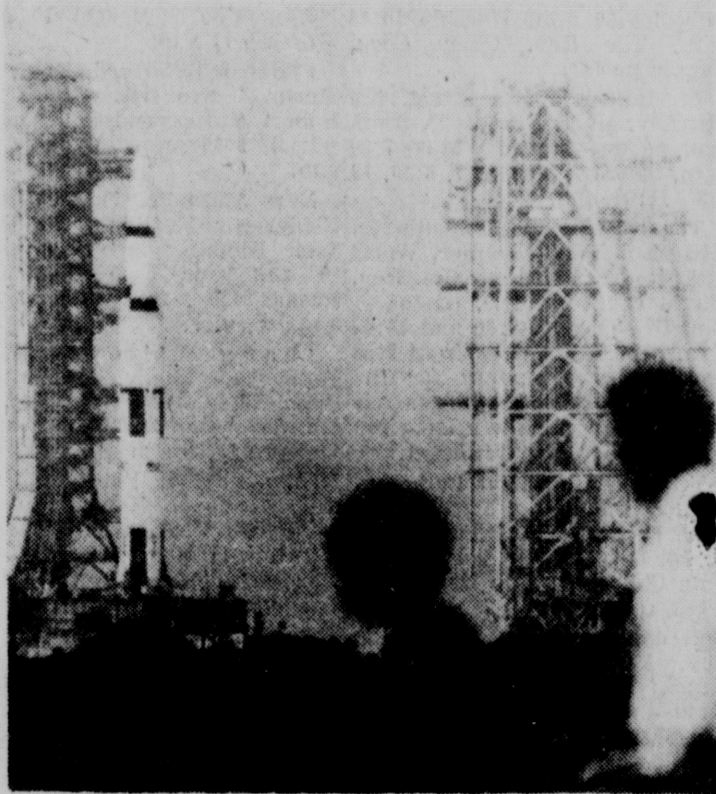

To seek that knowledge, Lovell and Haise will attempt the tricky landing Wednesday night at Fra Mauro, named for a 15th century Italian monk-cartographer.

Lunar Interior...Still Many Facts to Learn

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — Two large pieces of Apollo 13 hardware are to crash on the moon to create massive man-made moonquakes which could tell much about the lunar interior.

The 61-foot third stage of the Saturn 5 booster rocket is to smash with a force equal to 11 tons of TNT. The smaller lunar module—LM—cabin section, which will be impacted after the astronauts leave the moon, is to hit with a force of 1.2 tons. The impact of the rocket stage, called an S4B, will be recorded by a seismometer left on the moon last November by the Apollo 12 astronauts. The Apollo 13 crew will plant a second seismometer, and they hope to crash their LM between the two instruments.

When the Apollo 12 lunar module was crashed after it no longer was needed, scientists on the ground received a big surprise, as the seismometer recorded tremors for 55 minutes. On earth, a similar impact would reverberate only five or six minutes.

"This indicates that the structure beneath the surface of the moon is broken, with a wide variety of fragments," a space agency geologist said. "The earth is solid and transmits a clear signal. If it weren't solid and the material beneath the surface were badly broken up, you would have many reflecting surfaces to distort the signal. That's the type of thing we saw with the Apollo 12 impact. But we don't know why it rang so long."

"The S4B is much larger and will give us a better energy calibration," he said. "We will get readings on the object with a known weight, speed and striking point."

On previous Apollo flights, after the S4B stage separated from the spaceship, it was aimed toward an orbit about the sun to get it out of the way. But nine hours after the Apollo 13 launching April 11, ground controllers will change the course by firing small control jets to zero it in on the moon.

On this course, it will follow closely the path of the spaceship, but several hundred miles behind.

When Apollo 13 zips behind the moon and into lunar orbit three days after blast off, the 15½-ton rocket stage is to smash into the moon's Ocean of Storms at a speed of 3,700 miles an hour. No explosion is anticipated because fuel and pressurizing gases are to be vented overboard before the impact.

The astronauts will not see the crash because they will be on the far side of the moon, but they hope later to photograph results of impact.

The aiming point is 140 miles west of the Apollo 12 landing. All the remaining moon landing crews plan to plant a seismometer, each of which will have an active lifetime of at least a year.

"With only one seismometer," said Apollo 13 astronaut Fred W. Haise, Jr., "it is difficult to determine whether an event is a little one close by or a large one far away. With two we'll have the start of a network which will give us this information."

City Firemen Save Gas Storage Tanks

By HUGH REYNOLDS

KINGSTON
Kingston firemen were still on the scene this afternoon fighting a fire that broke out at 6:30 last night, gutting the Millens junkyard building at 290-296 East Strand.

"It's the worst fire we've had in years," one fireman told The Freeman. The alarm was telephoned in at 6:30 p.m., followed almost immediately by a firebox alarm. The second alarm went out at 6:37 p.m.

Black smoke, billowing high in the sky, could be seen all over the city, drawing several hundred spectators that, at times, hampered the firefighters.

Off-duty city firemen were called back for the major fire that wiped out the Millens building last night and early this morning. Deputy Chief Glyn Southard was in charge of the fire forces and was joined by Fire Chief James Brett, who took personal command of the operation.

One of the chief concerns was preventing the blaze from spreading to nearby gas storage tanks. Firemen have not released a report on the probable cause or an estimate of damages.

The building contained rags and other highly flammable items. Explosions could be heard in the blazing building as firemen poured water into it.

City police cars were dispatched in an effort to keep residents away from the fire scene. In many cases, would-be spectators parked their cars several blocks away and walked to the fire. One of the prime vantage points was the former St. Ursula Academy grounds above the Strand. Several hundred persons were clustered there, many with children.

Paul Fisher, a volunteer from Union Hose Company, reportedly suffered a cut hand and was treated at the scene.

Cordts Hose went to central station on standby.

Abort Bill---Rocky's Signature Needed

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — On July 1, the legal barriers to abortion in New York will be lowered to permit abortions with almost no restrictions.

This became evident Friday afternoon when Gov. Rockefeller's office reported that the governor would sign a measure to virtually repeal the state's strict bans against abortion.

The announcement came within minutes after the Senate approved the measure, which the Assembly had passed the day before.

The bill, with an effective date of July 1, would permit abortions to be performed within 24 weeks from conception by a physician with the consent of the mother.

Abortions after that date would be allowed only to save the life of the mother. This is the only deviation permitted in the current law, which has remained basically unchanged since 1823.

The new law would be one of the most liberal in the country. Unlike Hawaii, the only state to repeal its abortion laws, New York did not impose residency requirements. It also differs from a measure passed by the Maryland General Assembly in that New York does not require that the abortion be performed in a hospital.

Opponents, most of them reflecting the view of the Roman Catholic Church, fought the measure until the last minute. It was passed by a 31-26 vote. Senator Jay P. Rolison (R-Ulster-Dutchess) joined area Assemblymen H. Clark Bell and Emeel Betros in voting against the bill.

"Your hands are going to reach in the womb with the doctor," Sen. James H. Donovan of Chadwicks said during the three-hour debate. "You are going to kill, k-i-l-l, kill!" he cried, spelling out the word for emphasis.

Despite objections, the Assembly has moved to slap stiff jail terms on campus demonstrators. Story on page 18.

Senate Majority Leader Earl W. Brydges read from a book—the diary of an unborn child that had been aborted. The book was written by a Roman Catholic cardinal. "On Dec. 28th," he said with tears welling in his eyes. "it says: 'Today, my parents killed me.' He was unable to continue."

Few advocates spoke because they were confident of the passage of the bill. Thomas Laverne of Rochester, angered by the charges of opponents, said he refused to believe that anyone who voted for the bill was "un-godly."

"The only proposal here is shall we permit a woman who has a problem to go into the doctor's office and calmly discuss the future of herself and the unborn child," he said.

"Or shall we tell her: 'you can't do it in this state, there are too many Catholics here and we're worried about their vote.'" Laverne shouted. "She's going to get the abortion. She's going to London or Puerto Rico or she's going to get it in the back-alley butcher shop."

Some lawmakers said later they would offer amendments to limit the bill. The chances for passage of the amendments were considered doubtful, however.

The appeal was argued before Judge Mino in February and the order was signed this week. LBJ Returns to Washington; Relaxing With Some Old Foes

WASHINGTON (AP)—Tanned and relaxed, private citizen Lyndon B. Johnson chatted without rancor in reunions with those he had battled in the past—Democrats who fought him, Republicans who succeeded him, and reporters who irked him. When asked his opinion on current controversies in the nation's capital, he resisted the temptation despite the fact he has made politics a consuming interest for 33 years.

The former president, winding up his first long trip to Washington this week since leaving the White House, apparently was settling into the role of elder statesman and swearing off partisan politics. Twice he went to the White House, once for a private breakfast with President Nixon, and he and Mrs. Johnson were guests of Vice President and Mrs. Spiro T. Agnew for dinner one night. He also met with members of Congress, reminisced with some of his former Cabinet members, and attended a foreign policy briefing at the State Department.

The Johnsons came to town for the wedding of Victoria White, daughter of one of his friends in Washington, newspaperman William S. White. In renewing acquaintances, the subject of politics inevitably came up. Lunching with Texas Democrats last Wednesday, he learned the Senate had rejected Nixon's Supreme Court nominee, G. Harrold Carswell. Rep. J. J. Pickle, D-Tex., said Johnson withdrew into a meditative silence and declined to venture his opinion. That night, surrounded by nearly 50 reporters, Johnson said he didn't intend to second-guess Nixon on the war, court nominations or anything else—at least for the present.

When he visited the House earlier in the week, his recent illness opened neutral corridors of conversations for many who had once bitterly criticized him as president.

Do You Know Inside Story of Sandwich

MISS JACQUELINE STELTZ will perform Sonata No. 2 for flute and piano by Handel at the 21st annual Kingston High School Orchestra Spring Concert Friday, April 17 at 8:15 p. m. in KHS auditorium. She will be accompanied by Miss Rosanne Holt. Tickets may be obtained from KHS Orchestra members or at the door the night of the concert.

By TOM HOGE
Associated Press Writer

As most of us probably know, the Earl of Sandwich invented the snack that bears his name so that he could sit at the gaming tables day and night without taking a meal break.

It is doubtful whether the resourceful Earl ever dreamed that his simple combination of roast beef and bread would inspire the dazzling assortment of cold and hot delights now offered between slices of bread.

While Lord Sandwich was still living he saw his brainchild introduced into the English language. In 1762, when Edward Gibbon, the famed historian, dropped into a restaurant called the Cocoa Tree, he noticed two dozen of the most prominent lords of the realm "supping at little tables... upon a bit of cold meat or a Sandwich."

The French, accustomed to two-hour luncheons with all the trimmings, were slow to take up sandwich munching, but the Germans seized upon the idea and began luring restaurants patrons with a hearty tidbit known as belegte Bröckchen or "covered little-bread." This consisted of a slice of black or brown bread laden with cheese or sausage.

usually it was washed down with beer.

The Americans converted the sandwich into a full-scale meal ranging from bear steaks between two flapjacks smeared with orange marmalade to a la Ernest Hemingway, to the mammoth dozen ingredient heroes sold by Italian grocers and delicatessens.

Heroes soon were rivaled by the Dagwood named after the comic strip character. The Dagwood, according to one fan, should consist of four slices of bread, tomato slices, cheese, ham, dill pickle chips, a fried egg and a covering of butter, mayonnaise and lettuce.

Another gargantuan sandwich, the Poor-Boy, was born in the French Quarter of New Orleans. Legend has it that a sothearted cafe owner used to make these monsters for hungry waifs who clustered by his kitchen door. They consist of a length of French bread stuffed with roast beef, ham and cheese and garnished with relish.

The history of the sandwich is sketchy, since for many years gourmet authors refused to write about such an impromptu meal. It took the Scandinavians to bring the sandwich into its own.

The Danish Smorrebrod, or open-faced sandwich has won the respect of epicures of all lands. At Oskar Daviden's restaurant in Copenhagen, the four foot long sandwich menu offers 178 entries including virtually every kind of poultry, fish, shellfish, salads and cheese piled on slices of crisp white or sour rye bread.

Daviden's features an awesome seafood sandwich which calls for 200 miniature shrimp. And there is the Hans Christian Andersen, said to be the favorite of the famed poet and story-teller. It includes bacon, tomato, liver paste with truffles, meat jelly and horseradish.

One of the most popular of Denmark's sandwiches is made from slices of Frikadeller, Danish meat balls topped with pickled beets and cucumber slices on sour rye bread. This should be accompanied by a bottle of crackling cold Sancerre from France's Loire Valley.

Fashion Scarves

Designer Gres hung heavy metal pendants from scarves tied around the neck cowboy style at recent Paris showing. Sometimes the scarves matched the costume, sometimes they contrasted with it.

Fitted Weskit

At spring-summer fashion showing in Paris, Balmain showed a fitted weskit, coming just to the waist, worn with matching trousers under a long slender coat. All were in natural shantung.

Figure Camouflage

Philippe Venet put a voluminous evening shift of chiffon over a pale peach jump suit at a recent Paris showing, a good way to camouflage minor figure flaws that the one-piece trouser suits reveal all too easily.

KINGSTON, NEW YORK, APRIL 11, 1970

Rotary Job Fair

Kingston, Rotary Club Job Fair, which has been designed to serve as a showcase of careers available in this area, will be held Monday, April 13, at the New York State Armory. Eighteen local business firms will participate in the project for area high school seniors who are seeking full-time employment.

Members of the local service club have completed arrangements for the event which will bring together employers and high school seniors, who do not intend to pursue college courses. Many of the graduates have skills learned through the vocational and technical courses at BOCES and through business courses in the schools.

Some years ago job opportunities in this area were very limited, but that is no longer the case today. Business expansion of recent years in this area has opened career possibilities that should be looked into by job-seekers. Community industrial and business leaders want local qualified talent to make their careers here.

The basic purpose of Rotary Job Fair is to assist high school graduates in obtaining employment in area industries and businesses. The response of students and employers assures the success of this service to the community.

Disruptive Defendants

The Supreme Court struck a blow for orderly trials and respect for trial judges in an unanimous ruling outlawing courtroom sabotage and violence. It had special impact on the spate of recent tumultuous trials—the Chicago Eight riot conspiracy trial and the interrupted prosecution of 12 Black Panthers for an alleged conspiracy in New York.

The decision was not in either of these widely publicized cases, but it applies to them. The ruling was given in the case of William Allen, a Chicago man, whose 10- to 30-year sentence for a tavern robbery had been thrown out in the U.S. Circuit Court because he had been removed from the courtroom.

Justice William O. Douglas, though agreeing with the decision, said the court used the wrong case—that of an evidently mentally disturbed defendant—to outlaw courtroom sabotage and violence. Justice William J. Brennan, in a concurring opinion, hoped judges would make reasonable efforts to enable an excluded defendant to keep up with progress of the trial and to keep in touch with his lawyer.

The Allen case reached the Supreme Court ahead of the Chicago and New York cases, which are more recent, and which emphasized the extent to which defendants will go to create chaos at their own trials. Allen himself had told trial Judge Grover Niemeyer at one point, "When I go out for lunchtime, you're going to be a corpse."

Justice Hugo L. Black, who wrote the decision, also approved the binding and gagging of unruly defendants as well as jailing them for contempt to protect courtroom decorum.

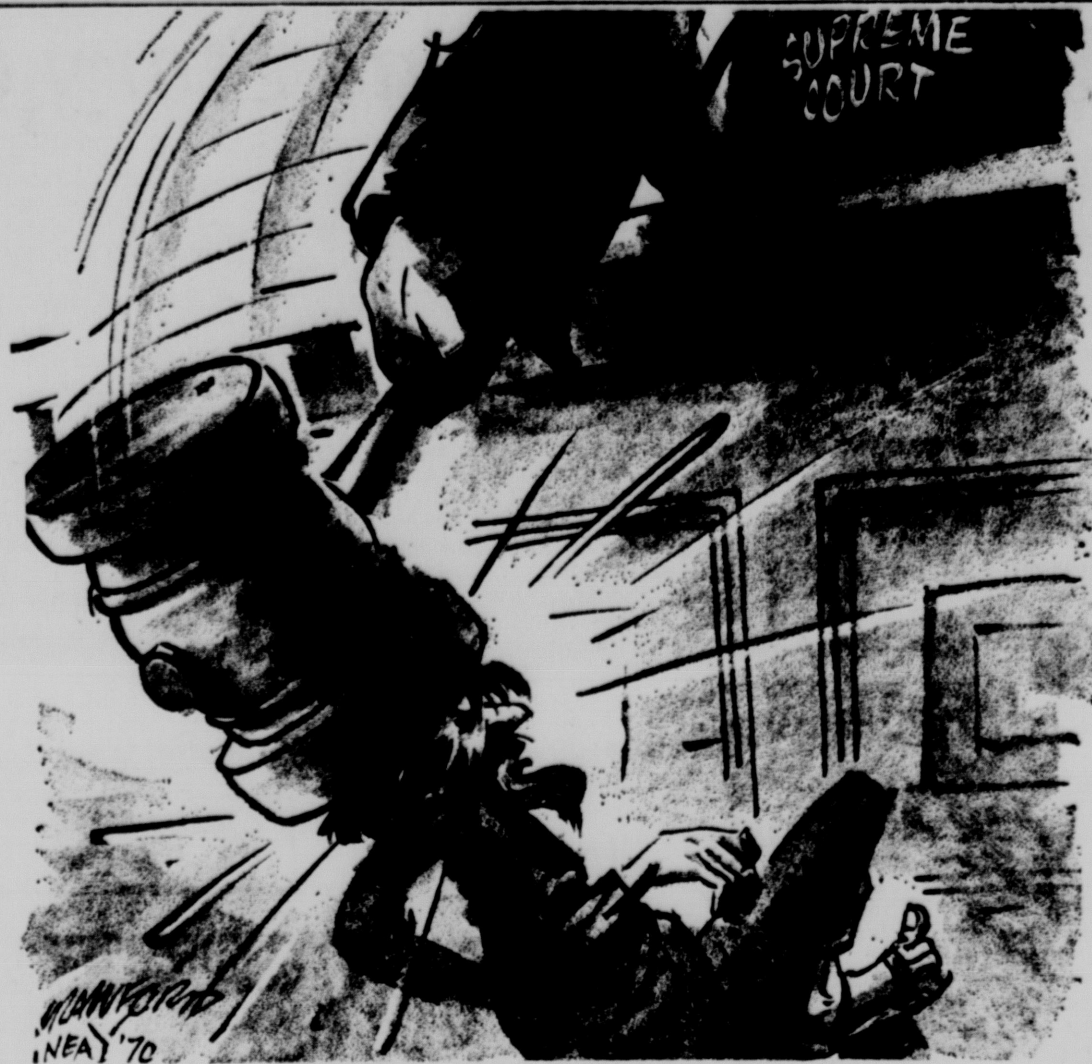

"It would degrade our country and our judicial system to permit our courts to be bullied, insulted and humiliated and their orderly progress thwarted and obstructed by defendants," Black said. It cannot be put any better.

David Lawrence Says Prospects for Deficit Budget Grows Constantly

WASHINGTON — The "balanced budget" idea is in trouble. Despite every effort President Nixon has made to cut expenses, the outlook for a small surplus of 1.3 billion dollars in the fiscal year beginning July 1 is starting to grow dim.

Yet in dealing with expected receipts of 202 billion dollars and outlays of nearly 201 billion, assumptions as to how much will be collected in revenues and what Congress will actually do about cutting expenses do not always turn out as predicted in January. Thus, it now appears that the interest on the national debt may run 300 million dollars or more above the estimate.

Also, the President has lifted the freeze on federal and state aid to state and local construction projects, adding approximately 600 million in federal funds to the spending in the coming fiscal year. But the most unexpected item has emerged in the postal pay increase. The 1970 budget assumed that Congress would pass a hike in postal rates to reduce postal deficits. But as it turns out, because of the strike, Mr. Nixon has been confronted with the necessity of presenting a federal pay raise not only for workers in the Post Office Department but government-wide for federal employees.

So the proposed 6 per cent raise will cost 2.5 billion dollars in fiscal year 1971 — or 1.3 billion more than the President had allowed for in his budget.

Mr. Nixon hopes to raise 2.6 billion dollars through postal rate increases, of which 2.3 billion would come from moving up first-class mail from six to ten cents. But this isn't considered likely to be passed by Congress, as both houses are reluctant to take such a step. In other words, the postal deficit will be much bigger than has been estimated heretofore.

Many of the President's reductions in expenditures will not be enacted. Congress, moreover, is very likely to propose additional Social Security benefits once more, and there is no allowance in the present budget for any such increase.

If the business slowdown continues, this could bring a diminution in economic activity below the levels on which the budget has been predicated. This would mean less receipts in taxes. Mr. Nixon proposes that collections of estate and gift taxes be speeded up this year so as to increase budget receipts. If Congress approves, this could offset part of the loss in revenue. But there are many other factors involved, and the prospects for a budget deficit in both 1970 and 1971 are growing constantly. From an economic standpoint, a deficit of two or three billion dollars — and even more — would not be as significant perhaps as the psychological impact.

There will, of course, be an increase in consumer spending because, with the pay raise and hikes in Social Security benefits, more money will be available to numerous citizens. This should have its effect in enlarging tax receipts.

When the whole situation is surveyed, it is apparent that fiscal policy is undergoing a slow but inevitable change from restriction to a period of ease. Labor unions in the private sector, meanwhile, will be demanding more and more pay boosts without necessarily assuring a corresponding amount in added productivity. But there are many unions which will demand pay raises similar to those given to government workers.

The Federal Reserve Board, incidentally, will have a difficult choice to make. Much as some of the members would like to ease the monetary policy, a reduction of interest rates would be viewed as inflationary at a time when consumer spending will have been increased.

The mere fact that there is to be a budget deficit apparently will not influence Congress to make substantial cuts in government expenses. The tendency — especially in an election year — has been to maintain the flow of government funds to various projects throughout the country which have been depending upon large amounts of federal money.

Instead of talking about a "budget balance," it is probable that the administration will be in the position of arguing that a deficit of a billion or two in a budget of more than 200 billion dollars — and with a gross national product of more than 985 billion — is relatively small and will not prove damaging to the economic future of the country.

back to the night of May 10, 1941, when Hess, dressed in a Luftwaffe flight lieutenant's uniform, bailed out of a Messerschmitt-110 fighter over Scotland, landing on the Duke of Hamilton's estate.

He had come on a special mission to Britain to make peace between the British and Hitler. Hess told the astonished farmer who ran to his rescue.

Winston Churchill, who had been watching Marx Brothers film earlier that evening, refused at first to believe that the parachutist was really Hess, so fantastic did the adventure seem.

Locked in the Tower of London for the duration of the war, beetle-browed Hess was later brought to trial at Nuernberg, along with Hermann Goering and the other top Nazis, and sentenced to life imprisonment for crimes against peace. Today he is the last of the seven Nazi bigwigs once locked up at Spandau.

Churchill frankly thought that Hess was mad, but Neave, who often saw him alone at the time of the trial, isn't so sure.

"When I served the indictment on Hess he calmly stuck it between the pages of a novel by Evelyn Waugh he happened to be reading, and otherwise behaved rather strangely," Neave recalls. "He was a great one for simulating loss of memory, but he was shrewd enough where his self-interest was at stake."

"For instance, he was sane enough to ask for a separate trial. And when this was denied, he made a great fuss about being seated next to Goering, whom he loathed."

Jack Anderson Say Taxpayers Are Memorializing Convicted Money Smuggler

WASHINGTON — Both Congress and the White House are quietly investigating how the Hirshhorn Museum, a doughnut-shaped edifice intended to immortalize a stock manipulator and convicted money smuggler, happened to be accorded an honored spot on Washington's historic Mall.

Now under construction, the Hirshhorn Doughnut will soon take its place beside the Washington Monument and Lincoln Memorial.

Rep. Frank Thompson, D-N.J., chairman of the House Library and Memorials Subcommittee, is checking into the curious background of Joseph E. Hirshhorn, now 70, who demanded and got a memorial to himself in the same neighborhood as those honoring George Washington and Abraham Lincoln.

At the same time, Presidential trouble-shooter Clark Mollenhoff is conducting a separate investigation into the tax aspects of Hirshhorn's $25 million art collection, which is supposed to be deposited in the Hirshhorn Doughnut.

The bantamweight, Latvian-born Hirshhorn immigrated to Brooklyn's turn-of-the-century ghetto and launched into a shady financial career before he was whiskered.

Sleazy Dealing

He made several fortunes on the curb market before the Securities and Exchange Commission hampered this sort of sleazy dealing. Then he branched into stock juggling across the Canadian border.

In Canada, he got in trouble with Canadian Securities Commissioner J. M. Godfrey who charged in a written report that Hirshhorn had pulled off a million-dollar "manipulation." No criminal charges could be brought because it was a "lone" deal, not a conspiracy which would be required for prosecution.

Instead, the fast-talking young American was ordered deported—an order he fought and won. Later, in 1945, he was fined $8,500 in an illegal securities sale case and for trying to smuggle $15,000 out of Canada.

In 1950, New York State Attorney General Nathaniel Goldstein warned Americans against a dubious Hirshhorn offering and cited "his two convictions for violating the Foreign Exchange laws of Canada."

In 1951, Hirshhorn's stock finagling came under fire in the Saskatchewan legislature where Liberal Alex Cameron called him a "racketeer." But the celebrated sharpie staged a fantastic uranium coup and amassed millions. In his busy dealings, he has changed wives three times.

Dangerous Curiosity

He also bought truckloads of contemporary paintings which, by 1955, were valued at $1.5 million. How the "value" figure reached more than $25 million is a question that has aroused Mollenhoff's dangerous curiosity.

There is a letter in the Smithsonian Institution's confidential files, for instance, from Hirshhorn's curator, Abram Lerner, insisting that the artists' own dealers should assess the value of the paintings. This is like asking a producer to evaluate his own movie and it was questioned by the Smithsonian officials.

A memo between the officials cautions: "Before the Smithsonian accepts the proposal, we must be absolutely sure that the valuation will be satisfactory to the Internal Revenue Service." Insiders concede that the collection cost far less than the $25 million evaluation.

Other Smithsonian documents, marked "Administratively Confidential," show that the Institution had to do some jockeying to get the collection. One tells how the vain Hirshhorn "would like some renewed attention from Mrs. (Lyndon) Johnson—a phone call or some such."

As it happened, Lady Bird and Lynda Bird quietly dropped in on the Hirshhorn collection in Greenwich, Conn., to "Oh" and "Ah."

This column has a copy of another crucial letter, which Hirshhorn wrote President Johnson on May 17, 1965. It instructs LBJ: "I would, of course, want binding assurances that the museum would bear my name in perpetuity."

He repeated this demand twice more in the letter.

Advice and Dissent

Some advisers were apprehensive about the conditions. Sherman Lee, director of Cleveland's Museum of Art, urged Mrs. Johnson to forego Hirshhorn's name lest it discourage other donors to the museum. He also warned Lady Bird of the "quixotic nature" of the collection.

The Chicago Art Institute's renowned Charles Cunningham at a meeting of art museum directors, according to the confidential minutes, snorted: "The United States government is being asked to furnish $10 to $12 million in appropriated funds to establish a memorial to Joseph Hirshhorn."

But LBJ was egged on by Supreme Court Justice Abe Fortas, a friend of Hirshhorn's. The President finally agreed that the taxpayers would build and maintain Hirshhorn gallery and a huge ditch crossing the mall that would contain a pool and sculptured garden.

By contrast, Andrew Mellon donated the National Gallery of Art, paid for the building and endowed its upkeep. He also modestly ordered his name left off.

But LBJ let a fast-talking stock manipulator hornswoogie him into immortalizing Hirshhorn on the same Mall with Washington and Lincoln. At the groundbreaking, Johnson solemnly intoned: "The flight of Apollo 8 and the birth of the Hirshhorn Museum tells us something about this country and its people."

And upon the same occasion, curator Lerner added: "Mr. Hirshhorn has the spirit shown by mountain climbers, explorers and burglars."

Note: Hirshhorn was reached by this column for comment in his New York City office, one of several offices and homes he keeps in the world's great cities. He affably agreed to call back in two hours with his comment but, at this writing, still hadn't returned the call.

Meanwhile, the low bidder on the project has unaccountably been allowed to adjust his bid upward. And the Hirshhorn Doughnut, with its proposed "garden" of sculpturing, is catching it from architectural critics.

Militant Student Groups Start Early Indoctrination

By RAY CROMLEY

NEA Washington (NEA) — Recently this reporter received a letter from a close Japanese friend who teaches chemistry at a Tokyo university.

"Accept my apology for not answering sooner," the message read, "but I have been locked out of my office for the past month by demonstrating students and so did not receive your note until now."

Thus far this may sound like an American college scene. But there's a difference. In that difference may be a portent of things to come here.

First, as background, note that this Japanese professor is very close to his students (most of the time) and in on many of their discussions.

Second, although violent student confrontations and student cells have afflicted Japanese universities for several decades, my friend's university has until now been little affected. The background of the change is the reason for this column.

This Japanese university had over the years worked out a mutually satisfactory relationship between the faculty, students and administrators.

But meanwhile, the Japanese extremists, who had started out infiltrating college faculties, shifted their emphasis to the high schools, because "teen-agers are more impressionable." Many of Japan's high schools were taken over by teachers who openly promote "leftist" activism.

This means, my friend writes, that every new freshman class is heavily infiltrated with indoctrinated young men and women who will not co-operate whatever the university does. "Their minds are 'fixed' before we get them. So what can we do?" Numbers are well-trained in the techniques of disruption and conditioned to violence.

Farther south in Asia, Viet Cong recruiters likewise aim at bringing young men and women into their organization at 14, 15, 16 and 17, again on the theory that these younger minds are most ready for indoctrination and most ready to break away from home.

(In villages the VC control, of course, the indoctrination begins much earlier. The most "promising" youth are sent to live at training centers before they reach their teens.)

So now take the United States.

This reporter's contacts at recent national meetings of the militant student and youth groups report this year a steep step up in participation by high schoolers. Never before have boys and girls this young been seen in such numbers. Never before have they taken such an active role.

Now run a random sampling of high schools in your neighborhood. You will be surprised at the percentage which have active militant groups. Not discussion groups. But cells promoting violence.

After your survey, do some thinking on these points:

The Japanese and Vietnamese experience is that high school-trained militants are more prone to emotional violence.

Students are easier to reach emotionally at these teen ages.

A high school student has quite a few years to operate and perfect his techniques before reaching maturity. Inefficient leadership is weeded out. A high school base thus gives more continuity to a militant movement.

Lenin Tottering as Cult Hero

By LEON DENNEN

NEA Foreign News Analyst
NEW YORK (NEA) — As preparations for the 100th anniversary of Lenin's birth (April 22) approach their climax, Russians are engulfed by propaganda glorifying the founder of the Soviet state.

The campaign to rescue Lenin from Stalin's shadow and elevate him to a cult figure has actually been going on for two years. The Kremlin's uneasy rulers obviously hope to exploit the Lenin Centenary in their effort to regain Russia's grip on the world Communist movement.

Their chances of success appear remote. Lenin's ideological heritage has been subjected to such widely differing interpretations by Communist parties, which have adapted it to local conditions, that the Kremlin's efforts are doomed.

Gone are the days when the ears of the world's Reds were attuned to Moscow. Rival variants "Marxism-Leninism" now claim that attention of leftist intellectuals and revolutionary students abroad. In the Soviet Union itself, young writers, scientists and students, disillusioned with an ossified ideology, look increasingly westward for inspiration.

The demise of Leninism has become generally apparent — except to "progressives" for whom recognition of this fact would represent admission of self-delusion.

The still creates the impression that his ideology retains some vitality is this: Several totalitarian regimes in East Europe and Asia — including Fidel Castro's Cuba in the Western Hemisphere — base their legitimacy on flamboyant maintenance of the Leninist fiction.

As a pseudoscientific theory, Leninism (or Marxism-Leninism as it is popularly known) was for a long time a powerful force in human thought and, particularly, in political organization.

However, in the last decade a series of mortal wounds were inflicted on the Kremlin's version of Leninism.

This is largely due to: The degeneration of the world Communist movement and ideology following the Russian-Chinese schism.

The rise in some of the Communist countries, including Russia, of a new technological class (or middle class) which is too sophisticated to accept the unscientific fallacies of Leninism.

The appearance of a new generation which is in revolt against the Communist dictators.

The increasing discrepancy between reality and Lenin's vision of a world revolution.

Russia is a mighty imperialist nation with enough nuclear weapons to threaten the free world. But Moscow's official Leninist dogma has lost its preeminence. Its influence has dwindled even among Communist parties that still profess loyalty to the Kremlin.

UDC and Narcotics Board..Means Are Justified

TWO INSTANCES of what we will label "honest deception" were recorded at Tuesday night's Common Council meeting: one by Mayor Frank Koenig and one by Alderman Don Quick.

In the first instance, the mayor tried to slip a curve past the young guys from the State Urban Development Corporation by including the Rondout Neighborhood Center as part of the Broadway East Housing project.

Koenig and UDC had been discussing package plans but the package UDC wanted was Broadway East housing and Hurley Avenue housing, not Broadway East housing and the neighborhood center. Frank slipped his package in late Tuesday afternoon.

UDC's reaction? . . . Nice try Frank, but no cigar. Both sides learned something from that encounter. Koenig learned that the guys from UDC may be young but they ain't dumb. He already knew that they were willing to go with the city just about all the way down the line.

Several Koenig suggestions were adopted by UDC such as requiring that any private developer who ultimately takes over the project be a resident of New York State, subject to all its laws.

KOENIG, no doubt, was guarding against a recurrence of another Hillcrest Gardens incident where the city had definite housing violations but could not prosecute because the owners lived out of state.

UDC learned that Koenig is serious about the redevelopment of the Broadway East area. As one guy told us, "Frank did pull a bit of a surprise on us. But it's no big thing. It was just an attempt to get something else for the downtown area. We can't knock that. At least he's trying."

One source in UDC indicated that they didn't refuse the Neighborhood Center part of the package work because they didn't want it. UDC hasn't done much work on recreational facilities. It might have been shot down and the whole package would have gone down with it. They figure they've got a good chance of passing the housing project in itself. The neighborhood center can come later. Housing, serve on it. There were no doubt plenty of concerned citizens willing to serve, but the state law is rather specific on just who is to serve on the council.

It calls for a doctor, a lawyer, a clergyman, a guidance counselor and at least one woman. Quick and his committee (the mayor had worked on the problem before that) simply couldn't come up with a doctor and a guidance counselor from the city of Kingston.

They found Dr. Elmer McKay from Woodstock and Bernard Farrell from Rolling Meadows ready, willing and able to serve.

Quick took a chance on naming the two non-city residents to the city commission, banking on a change in the state rules on residency requirements.

Don was clever about it. The street addresses (all in Kingston) of Mrs. Cranston, the Rev. Croston and Mike Bruhn, the other members of the narcotics counsel, were all listed in the resolution.

Dr. McKay was listed as a physician at IBM, Kingston, which he is and Farrell was listed as a guidance counselor at Kingston High School, which he also is. Quick didn't anticipate that leaving out the addresses of Dr. McKay and Farrell would be like waving a red flag in front of the press (where do those guys live? Let's check the phone book) but that's not the point.

THE POINT is that Quick made a sincere effort to do something constructive for the city with the Narcotics Council just as Koenig did with his package plan.

The people that accepted the posts on the Council should be commended. Likewise Quick and his committee for seeking them out. Perhaps Quick was a little sneaky, but then again, nobody's perfect. Hopefully, the state legislature will see its way clear to change the residency laws.

As far as UDC goes, it looks like a good program. There was some local hesitancy about applying for it for fear of the agency's sweeping powers. Actually, UDC can come into a community, the way the law is written, and do just what it pleases. In fact, UDC has acquiesced to just about every city request in an effort to get something built here.

Right now, it looks like a good deal for the city. Time will tell.

COUNCIL NOTES — Pens and pencils were angrily bounced off the press table as a result of some late communications from the mayor at Tuesday night's meeting of the Council. (Those guys from the press are always belly-aching about something).

Koenig sent communications dated the day of the Council meeting calling for the transfer of funds for the renovation of the municipal building on East O'Reilly Street for the BPW's new office and a request for a salary increase for city housing code inspectors to bring them up to par with federal inspectors.

WE REALIZE that the mayor can send communications any time he so pleases. He should voluntarily hold himself to some kind of a deadline, like maybe the Monday morning before the Council meetings. Maybe some of the 7,000 people who voted for Koenig last November would like to see what he's sending to the Council . . . in advance.

they figure at this point, is more important to the city than recreation.

DON QUICK, as we said, was guilty of a small deception, but once again, the means seem to justify the end.

Quick's committee named a five-member Narcotics Guidance Council at Tuesday night's meeting. It was unanimously approved. Certainly, it is something that is needed.

The problem was in getting residents of the city to

County Mental Health Drive: Plans Made, Committee Named

MEMBERSHIP DRIVE—The Ulster County Association for Mental Health membership committee met recently to formulate plans for a membership drive in May. Seated (L), Mrs. William A. KINGSTON Ulster County Association for Mental Health will launch a membership drive during the month of May seeking a membership to at least equal one per cent of the population of the county.

At a meeting held recently at the home of the association president, Dr. Frederick W. Holcomb Jr., plans for the drive were formulated by the membership committee which includes Mrs. William A. Krum, chairman; Robert S. Diamond and John Betaudier, co-chairmen.

According to Mrs. Diana Geiger, executive secretary, the four major areas in which the value of members becomes apparent includes: social action, manpower, education and finance.

According to Mrs. Geiger the nature and extent of mental illness is such that dealing with it involves government at all levels. A local membership assists the Mental Health Association in its efforts to deal with the legislative aspects of a mental health program. In concert with other local mental health membership bodies, the association becomes part of a state membership and assists state legislatures in their endeavor to deal with state-level mental health activities and as part of the nationwide Mental Health Association, assistance is provided to Federal lawmakers as well.

With regard to manpower, she states, that volunteers are needed to carry on programs of service to a state hospital or to the community mental health facility and other projects.

In the area of education she stresses that progress in the field of mental health comes largely through understanding, and it is through education that understanding is achieved.

Financially volunteers provide literally thousands of dollars worth of free service to the Mental Health Association. Still, she adds, the raising of funds is essential if we are to cooperate effectively.

National research must continue and local programs and meetings must be paid for. It takes money as well as people to run a Mental Health Association and significant revenue must be realized through the annual membership drive, she concluded.

TEEN SCENE: Images That Johnny Cash Bought

By LEI

Will the real "boy named Sue" please stand up? During his career, Johnny Cash must have spent more on public relations men than he has on guitars. Unfortunately, the stories they cranked out to the media have changed so often that it would appear Johnny has not only lived a double life—he's lived about thirty of them at the same time.

The bare framework of the story remains the same: Johnny was born the middle child of nine offspring of Ray and Carrie Cash. He grew up in poverty in Dyess, Ark. After a hitch with Uncle Sam, he and Sun Record mogul Sam Phillips discovered each other, and John's musical career was launched.

The rest of the story varies, depending on whether your facts come from an album cover, an underground newspaper, a pulp magazine newsweekly, the songs Cash sings, or the grim etchings of his face.

It is significant to notice that on his early albums, air-brushes and mist photography did a very good job of concealing scars, lines, and shadows that mark that face. In fact, the singer was so prettied up that he looked like a real sissy! The biographies of Johnny appearing at that time did nothing to dispel the "boy-next-door image"—they stressed his religious background, his fine army record, his rural background, and his four cute little daughters.

As each record sold more copies, the Cash face emerged from the mist, and on his most recent records, the magnifying lens dwells ruthlessly on the mirthless smile, the gouged, paralyzed cheek, and the driven eyes. Those features have become familiar, bigger than life on television, and they are flashed, twenty feet high, on the movie screen. Since Johnny Cash has allowed his battered face to be exposed to the public, bigger than life, the life that produced that face has been revealed too. And perhaps just as out-of-proportion.

His records have always featured stories of his childhood and family history—how Ray Cash had to carry a revolver when he went courting Carrie Rivers ("the prettiest girl in Cleveland County" or how Carrie, decades later, managed to produce a Christmas for her nine hungry children while Papa Ray rode the rails. Recently, however, as Johnny gained popularity, and as it became acceptable (in fact, usual) for entertainers to live less-than-ideal lives, his songs included less wholesome memories. He started recording words of four, five and seven letters, and memories such as his arrest for possession of stimulant drugs.

Less than a year ago, a pulp "fan magazine" tried to cover up the arrest, claiming that while the pills were the type that can be bought at the supermarket, Johnny minded being searched, and blistered varnish ten miles away with his language. He was promptly busted.

That might all be true, but only a few months later, a major newsweekly detailed Johnny's desperate (and supposedly successful) battle against speed, alcohol, and pills.

It was also after the gold records started stacking up that Johnny ended his unhappy marriage to the mother of his four daughters. Less than a year later, he married June Carter, who had just divorced her husband, country singer

Carl Smith. A few months after the marriage, June's son, Kenny, was killed in an automobile accident.

Who is the real Johnny Cash? The patriotic, religious singer with the patience and affection to tame wild cows, who loves his parents and family? Or the drug-haunted convict with the ruthless temper driven from place to place by his guilts, memories, and doubts?

Actually, he may be both. The urge to wander, the use of drugs, and the search for meaning in life were common in the entertainment world long before the "hippies" and easy riders brought them to nationwide attention. There have always been—and always will be—a large number of unstraight straights. Johnny Cash stands, a monument to all of them, with a slice of Mom's Apple Pie in one hand and a bottle of Mother's Little Helpers in the other. His eyes are full of leaden tears that will never fall, but his crushed mouth smiles.

Because whatever the past has held for the son of Ray and Carrie Cash, what the future holds seems certain. Johnny Cash is going to be a musical legend. Perhaps the first one to come with either a "G" or "X" rating.

After-School Executives Achieve

In Kingston, as in many cities throughout the United States, many of the younger generation are coming to know the meaning of business and free enterprise through Junior Achievement.

In the past six months, 44 teenagers have been participating in the Junior Achievement Program in Kingston. These after-school executives have operated three Junior Achievement Companies which they financed through the sale of capital stock. The three sponsoring companies are Kingston Knitting Mills, Ferroxcube Corporation, and IBM Corporations.

Each of the sponsoring companies provides one or two advisors; however, the J.A. Company itself is organized on a corporate pattern, affording each of its teenage members with the opportunity of gaining a better appreciation of the American Business System of Free Enterprise.

All three local J.A. Companies meet weekly in Public School 2, West Chestnut Street. This site is the former home of another center of learning—Ulster County Community College. The public is cordially invited to witness these miniature companies manufacture their products on Tuesday evenings at the Junior Achievement Center, West Chestnut Street.

The products range from rail-road spike desk pens to fire alarms and kitchen-type bulletin boards. One of the educational experiences came when the achievers priced their products.

This is done much the same as in any business enterprise. Achievement Companies and the sponsoring advising companies, a Board of Directors, comprised of executives in the business community, meets at the Junior Achievement Center on the third Tuesday of each month to oversee the business and affairs of the total corporation.

Youth in News—Head for Sea

Shipboard campus is in the offing for one Ulster County student this fall as Youth in the News scans the college horizon this week.

Nancy Nitschke, presently attending State University at Plattsburgh, will take a leave of absence to attend Chapman College for the fall semester.

The campus is the S.S. Rydman owned by the Holland-American line. On Oct. 10 the ship leaves New York for England, The Netherlands, Spain, Greece, Turkey, Italy, Madeira, Sierra Leone, Brazil, Trinidad, Colombia, thru the Panama Canal, El Salvador, Acapulco, Mexico and docks in Los Angeles on Jan. 29.

The students spend three or four days ashore at each port, and while at sea pursue a regular course of study. The ship is air conditioned and carries 500 students.

Nancy is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Nitschke of 46 Spaulding Lane, Saugerties. She graduated from Saugerties High School in June 1968. She received scholar incentive award and a regents scholarship for use in New York State. She has been on the Dean's List each semester at college and has a cumulative average of 2.65.

Another Saugerties girl, Jane D. Overbaugh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Overbaugh of 23 Lafayette Street, will be a participant in a concert of the combined Goucher College Glee Club, the Johns Hopkins University Glee Club, the Goucher Chapel Choir, and the Goucher-Hopkins Symphony, to be presented at the college on April 25. Jane is a member of the Goucher Glee Club.

A graduate of Saugerties High School, she is a senior at Goucher, majoring in Political Science.

Bruce Donald Jameson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald A. Jameson of 235 Main Street, Kingston, is now attending Northrop Institute of Technology, Inglewood, Calif.

Enrolled in the College of Engineering, he is working toward a bachelor of science degree in Aircraft Maintenance Engineering. He is a Kingston High School graduate.

High school seniors are being accepted daily at college's across the country. Some have received word of acceptance just recently.

Thomas Panek, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Panek of Highland, a member of the 1970 graduating class at Highland High School, has been accepted in the forestry program at Columbia-Greene Community College, Athens. The program is specifically designed for students wishing to transfer to the State College of Forestry at Syracuse.

Nancy E. McKittrick, a senior at Ocean City High School, will be among the first group of women to enroll at Lafayette College, according to Richard W. Haines, director of admissions.

Miss McKittrick is the daughter of Mrs. Florence M. McKittrick, 732 North Shore Road, Beesley's Point, N.J., and Alexander J. McKittrick, 1616 W. Chestnut Street, Kingston. Her father is a 1950 Lafayette graduate.

Miss McKittrick is one of the first 266 girls to enroll at Lafayette which has had an all-male enrollment for 138 years. The college plans to admit 135 women — 115 freshmen and 20 upperclass transfer students—in the fall.

Miss McKittrick plans to seek a bachelor of science degree in mathematics at Lafayette. She is layout editor of the student newspaper at Ocean City High and has been involved in several senior activities, including the refreshment stand, float and decoration committee. She has also participated in swimming.

Three Ulster County high school seniors have been accepted at the State University Agricultural and Technical College at Delhi.

Milton Holsapple, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Holsapple of Box 95 Bearsville will study business administration technology at Delhi starting in September. He is a senior at Onteora High School.

Vincent R. Guido Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent R. Guido of 180 Sherry Lane, this city will enter Delhi in September for study in the engineering technology field.

Dianna Virginia Clark, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Clark of River Road, Port Jervis, will enroll in the business technology course at Delhi in September.

Both Dianna and Vincent are seniors at Kingston High School.

Honors have come to area students at college during the past few weeks.

Eileen Wager, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wager of

NANCY NITSCHKE

Future teachers is a very active group at Rondout Valley with students taking an active part in the teaching role.

Jo Ann Hajak, a Rondout Valley High School Future Teachers of America member, assists Mrs. Nancy Sack at the Middle School with a fifth grade reading group. Now in her second year of classroom assistance, Jo Ann works with her group of four in the same way a regular teacher would. She makes her own plans and follows her own copy of the teacher's manual.

Each reading group has its own book; and Jo Ann's group is no exception. Mrs. Sack said that Jo Ann had made her own study plan all last year, with "good results. She is a very resourceful person; for example, under her direction her group made posters on favorite books.

Jo Ann's group has benefited from having its own teacher and the opportunity to work in a more challenging situation. Mrs. Sack commented on the good relationship Jo Ann has with her pupils. "She has proved very capable, and she is definitely needed."

As in the case of the other FTA "teachers," Jo Ann is benefiting herself, her students and her cooperating teacher through the practical experience of being a part-time "working teacher."

New Paltz Students Care

NEW PALTZ Concern with today's problems is much in evidence at New Paltz Central High School.

The Spanish Club of New Paltz Central High School has been involved in a project of earning money for the Peace Corps School Partnership Program. This branch of the Peace Corps deals with building schools in underdeveloped areas of South America.

Last year the club set $23 to the Peace Corps to aid this program. Since then their adviser, Mrs. Adelaide Crews has received numerous letters of thanks with details about the use of their contribution. The money was used to help finance the building of a school in Tio, Peru. Tio is located in a higher area of South America near Cuzco.

The letters taught the members various facts as to the way of life of these people and their continued enthusiasm for the building of the school. One of the men responsible for the building of the school is John Harden, a Peace Corps volunteer from Albion, Mich.

So far this year, the club has earned $48 for the program by sponsoring two fund-raising events, a bake sale and a sale of pinatas to the elementary schools during the Christmas season.

A group of 10 students visited the Philharmonic Hall in New York City recently to attend its annual assembly program entitled the World Youth Forum. The theme for this year's program was "Need for Change." Delegates from various countries discussed the prominent problems of their country such as war, poverty, pollution, overcrowding and limited education.

The Forum, is a worldwide attempt to have the young people of all countries, the future leaders of the world, get together to discuss each country's problems and policies and why they need be changed or rectified, and possibly how.

The audience heard as guest speaker the Reverend Dr. Martin Luther King, Sr. Who addressed the audience concerning the theme Am I My Brother's Keeper. Elaborating upon his theme, Daddy King said that brotherhood is a necessity if we are to survive as a people. The prevailing ideas was that youth is the hope for tomorrow.

The advent of warmer weather has stepped up the run-off from the hills and as a result area trout streams were reported "running a little high and somewhat roily." This was the case at spots that were checked along the Esopus and the Sawkill.

No exceptional catches have been noted, although Spada's Sport shop reported a limit catch of six Rainbows by two metropolitan anglers, who declined to hang around to have their pictures took.

There is a hatch on the water and if the warm trend continues, it will be fly time soon. Up to now the best lure seems to be salmon eggs and minnows. It's time for the bugs to start popping up on the water.

LOCAL ANGLERS who have been "in" on the outstanding fishing afforded by the Beaverkill at the Bonnie View in Lew Beach will be interested in the opening day statistics.

The water was "low, clear and beautiful" for fishing. However, the old story of having the "know how" seemed to be a prime requisite for filling the creel. Five of the anglers at Bonnie View accounted for four fish while the other six had an aggregate of more than 40. Included in the catch were browns, brookies and rainbows in the 12-to-16 inch range.

Spinners seem to be the killers with worms a close second. One fisherman even scored on nymphs. Chic Kelly, local plumbing inspector, fishing with plumber Bill Bence and electric motor man, Tom Gallagher and son, Allen, found the day to be highly successful on the famed Beaverkill.

Two Pennsylvania game wardens, on a fishing holiday, were also trying their luck at the Bonnie View stream.

THE HARDEST PART of getting ready for the new fishing season is . . . getting ready! If you're like most of the boys, the fishing rods are left stacked in the corner where they were left last fall and the tackle box is still in the same unorganized condition it was after last year's final fishing trip.

If you haven't made your debut yet, here are a few "get ready" tips. Lures are the first order of cleanup business. Metal and plastic lures should be washed in a warm—not hot—soapy solution to remove grime and grease which dulls the finish, making them unattractive to fish. Hang washed lures on a line in the basement to dry, then polish to a high gloss with a soft rag. Metal polish will brighten brass spinners and spoons. Apply clear lacquer to retain the luster.

FLIES AND FEATHERED jigs should be checked for loose thread, rusted hook eyes, bits of leader, and general condition of the body materials. If they are damaged, it's best to discard old flies and obtain replacements.

Wipe rods clean with a mild soap solution, check ferrels and guides for frayed or broken threads, and test the reel seats for firmness. If a rod is several years old, it is a good idea to revarnish the thread windings. Special rod varnish is available from supply houses.

Sand and dirt have a way of getting into any reel, and now is the time to clean them before serious damage occurs. Follow the manufacturer's directions for dismantling. If they are lost, carefully take the reel apart, clean it and apply a light density grease to moving parts.

Don't forget to replace spinning and bait casting lines, especially if they're more than a year old. Check last year's line for frayed and rough places. Dry fly lines should be treated with dressing recommended by the maker.

One other pre-season tip recommended is to spend an evening honing the hooks on all your lures. After all, what good is all this preparation . . . if the hooks are dull?

NOW THAT THE SEASON is upon us, here are some all-time New York State records compiled in the Genesee Fishing Contest.

Rainbow Trout—21 pounds even, caught by Earl Crane of Hornell with minnow on Aug. 8, 1947, in Keuka Lake. Brock Trout—8 pounds even, taken by Edward Morehouse of Brant Lake, with spoon on Pharoah Lake on June 17, 1961.

Brown Trout—21 pounds, 8 ounces, caught by R.P. Sobkowski of Horseheads, with minnow in Seneca Lake on May 29, 1963.

Lake Trout—30 pounds, 3 ounces, taken by H.H. Sinsabaugh, Corning, with sawbelly in Seneca Lake on Aug. 9, 1947.

American Oil Company spokesman, Richard E. Newman, speaking before the National Engineers Week Banquet in Fort Wayne, Indiana, said his company has been studying water pollution for 50 years and air pollution for 20 years, but hopes the federal government "will wait until the results are in" before imposing stringent anti-pollution controls on the petroleum industry.

Five returning lettermen are the reason for the optimism in the Saugerties High School tennis camp these days.

Arlington Nine Nips Kingston Team, 2-1

KINGSTON Kingston High School pitcher, George Geanuleus and Tom Gallo, picked up 13 strikeouts between them yesterday, but received little offensive help from the rest of the club as the Maroons fell victim to the visiting Admirals of Arlington, 2-1, at Dietz Stadium.

Kingston now owns a 1-2 record, while Arlington, defending Central Section champs of the Dutchess County Scholastic League, are 4-0. Neither team has played a league game as yet.

Crafty Craig VanBogelin was the winning pitcher, picking up six K's in his five-inning stint. Steve Cribbley mopped up for the winners. Geanuleus had nine strikeouts victims to his credit in five stanzas while Gallo struck out four of the six men he faced. Both teams managed but four hits apiece.

Geanuleus was sharp in the early going, but fell victim to some bad luck in the top of the second inning. Arlington right fielder Jim Nemes lofted a long fly ball to centerfielder Gary Short. Short, moving back for what appeared to be a sure out, tripped over the track that runs around the field and the ball fell and rolled some 20 feet beyond him.

Nemes scrambled to third and made the turn, however, Short's throw to the cutoff man was wide of the mark and Nemes came home with the first run of the tilt.

The Maroons tied it up in their half of the second as shortstop Rich Freese led off with a hard single and moved to second on an infield out. He then came home with the equalizer on a hard single to right by Ralph Perry.

Arlington scored the "icer" in the top half of the fourth as Mike Burke led off with a single and moved over on an out.

A walk to Cribbley and an error on a grounder by Nemes loaded the sacks.

Admiral Coach Fritz Jordan then signaled for shortstop "Boots" Panella to lay down a sacrifice bunt and he dropped a beauty to score Burke.

The locals had a threat going in the bottom of the seventh inning as Freese was on second base with two out. Perry sent a screamer into center, but Ted Morehead got a good jump on the ball, played in perfectly and made a knee-high grab to end the game.

Both VanBogelin and Geanuleus were on, but the breaks went with the Admiral hurler in a game that was marred by cold winds, rain and snow flurries. Kingston began to do some "first ball" hitting on Craig and managed to get a man to second base in just about every inning. But, the Maroons were never able to move up any closer.

The locals play host to Poughkeepsie Monday afternoon in a 3:30 tilt.

Kingston's JVs fared slightly better than their varsity counterparts as they nipped the Junior Admirals, 2-0. Jim Milano was the winning pitcher, striking out six while allowing just four hits.

Bob Snellbarger took the loss. Jim Ferraro led Kingston at the plate with two hits and two RBIs. Charlie Yankoglu also had two hits for the winners.

Yancey, Littler Tie for Lead in Masters Play

LOOK OF A WINNER—Gene Littler looks back over his shoulder in time to see the ball hit the cup on the ninth hole for a par four. Littler finished with a 2-under-70 for a second-round total of 139 to tie Bert Yancey for the second-round lead. (UPI TELEPHOTO)

AUGUSTA, GA. (AP) — Bert Yancey, an admitted "sour-puss" who busted out of West Point because of nerves, now wants to be known as the nice guy who won the Masters.

"I'm capable of two more good rounds," Yancey said Friday. "Somebody else had better shoot better to beat me, because I don't think I'll turn in any bad rounds."

A confident-looking, grinning Yancey shot a steady 70 to match mild-mannered veteran Gene Littler at five-under-par 139 at the halfway stop in the 34th Masters golf tournament at Augusta National Club.

Contenders popped up from California, South Africa and even Japan, but Yancey withstood the pressure on a course "I dearly love to play."

Billy Casper stormed in with 68 to trail by a stroke at 140. The Bonita, Calif., star was locked with young Bob Lunn of Sacramento, Calif., who had a second round 70.

Gary Player, the muscular South African who is trying to allow talk of threats on his life fade away, used sensational iron play to shoot 68 and bulletted into contention at 142, three behind the Yancey-Littler tandem.

Takaaki Kono of Yokohama blazed in with 68 for 143.

And then there's Tommy Aaron—the man who died and was reborn.

Aaron, the first-day leader at 68, collapsed early with two bogeys and a double bogey. The slim Georgian fought back, however, to par the next five holes and shot a sharp 34 on the back nine to stand alongside Player at 142.

Yancey has been a major tournament frontrunner before, but he has yet to win. The Tallahassee, Fla., product blew a four-shot lead on the final day of the 1968 U.S. Open at Rochester, N.Y., when Lee Trevino zipped past him to instant stardom.

The blond, who finished his collegiate career at Florida State after a nervous breakdown as a military academy cadet, was the No. 1 man for three days in the 1967 Masters. He finished third, four strokes behind Gary Brewer when outshot 67-73 on Sunday.

In addition to his ideas of winning this time, Yancey would enjoy ridding himself of habits that earned the nickname "The Fog." A few people—Yancey calls them "semi-friends"—claimed he was dense and distant. "I admit it. I was a sour-puss," he said. "My agent got me out of it. He told me to throw away that damn sun visor and smile a lot."

Yancey grinned as he rammed in consecutive birdie putts on 11, 12 and 13 to rocket into the lead Friday. The three holes "around the bend" are considered the toughest stretch on the rolling, 7,000-yard layout.

While leaders said greens were softer and putted better Friday, the major reason for high scores was still an inability of approach shots to die near the cups. Some, like Arnold Palmer and Player, said the fairway grass was high and rugged to contend with and the little Japanese Kono said the greens were the fastest he's seen in his life.

Dave Hill, last year's No. 2 money winner, slipped quietly into contention with a 70 for a one-under 143 total. He is tied with Kono, who has 75-68. It is Vinnie Giles of Richmond, Va., with 78-72-150.

Among notables failing to make the six-over par cutoff were 1969 PGA Ray Floyd at 152 and Argentine Robert de Vicenzo at 151.

Yancey's life wasn't all roses Friday. He was socked with a $150 fine by Golf Commissioner Joe Day for pulling out of last week's Greater Greensboro Open with a lame excuse. Yancey said, "It was a terrible thing to do. I'll never do it again."

Yancey opened with a poor 78 causing him to be dropped from the field. He admitted Friday, "I wanted to get to Augusta and practice my putting."

Yancey, 31, is 18 under par for his 14 rounds in the Masters. He was third in 1967 and 1968 and finished 13th last year.

Jack Nicklaus' hope of a fourth Masters green coat faded when he blasted his second shot on the par-five eighth hole into a deep ravine.

Three Are Tied In Golf Classic

HATTIESBURG, Miss. (AP)—Five players went into today's third round of the $35,000 Magnolia Golf Classic tied with 6-under par 134s.

Light rains over the Hattiesburg Country Club course apparently didn't bother the action Friday, although the field was cut to 50. It took a 141 or better to survive the cut.

Rod Curl, Chris Blocker, Jerry Heard, Byron Comstock and Rocky Thompson shared the lead, one stroke ahead of Roy Pace and Mike Reason.

Six players were bunched at 136, while crowd favorite Doug Sanders had rounds of 70 and 67 for a 137 total.

Hall Sets New Record In Swimming Event

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Gary Hall of Garden Grove, Calif., "definitely was trying for the record" in the men's 400-yard individual medley here Friday night.

Hall swam the distance in 2:59.7, shattering an earlier mark of 3:00.8 he had set for the record.

"I went in going for the record," he said, "but I didn't know I had it until the end of the race when I looked up at the scoreboard."

Hall was one of three swimmers who finished as double winners in the second day of the four-day National AAU Short Course swimming championships at the Keating Natatorium here.

Hall scored his first victory in the 200-yard backstroke Thursday.

John Kinsella, 17, brought home his second win and a new meet record in the men's 200-yard freestyle event in 1:40.8 to wipe out the old mark of 1:41.2 held by Don Schollander.

Kinsella, who set a record in the men's 500-yard freestyle Thursday night, admitted he "almost blew the win."

"I was slow off the starting block and started scrambling in the first 50 yards to catch up the time," he said. "I just blew my cool and was starting to get tired after three laps."

Debbie Meyer, the three-time Olympic gold medal winner, picked up her second victory of the meet as she fought head-to-head with Susie Atwood of the Lakewood (Calif.) Aquatic Club to win the women's 400-yard individual medley in 4:34.2.

Miss Meyer's first win came Thursday night in the 500-yard freestyle.

Miss Atwood, who was top qualifier for the event, finished with a 4:35.13. Miss Meyer, of the Arden Hills (Calif.) Swim Club, had qualified eighth.

Another American swimming record fell Friday night as Santa Clara (Calif.) Swim Club's "A" team of Mitch Ivey, Brian Job, Fray Heath and Steve Doyle shattered the men's 400-yard medley relay time in a 3:24.14.

The old record of 3:25.8 was set by the Indiana University swimming team in 1969.

The Lakewood Aquatic Club landed another championship win as the "A" team of Susie Atwood, Kim Brecht, Pam Lines and Bonnie Adair won the women's 400-yard medley relay in 4:01.8.

Hoop Event Starts Today

Boyle's A.C. features four big names and the top local basketball name of past years, Joe Uhl. Local lawyer Edward (Ted) Feeney has brought together what should be the team to go all the way. He has named 6-8, Craig Ludwig of West Virginia; 6-5, Bill Slacks of Canisius; 6-5, Tom Tenwick of the University of Richmond and 6-5, Bill Tenwick of Kent State as the big four to go with Uhl.

Fellicello's third place finishers in the Poughkeepsie Y Tourney proved their ability to take on the big boys as they lost 77-76 in the semi-finals to the Dutchess County Flyers, the eventual tournament winners.

Sunday night the 7 p.m. game will be between Paddock Chargers of Poughkeepsie and Garden of Eden from Kingston. The 8 p.m. contest sends Sickler's Delivery of Kingston against C.W.A. of Newburgh. Spence Shows He's Worth It

By United Press International

Spencer Haywood is worth every cent of that $1.9 million contract he signed with the Denver Rockets.

With Haywood leading the way the Rockets came from last to first place in the Western Division of the American Basketball Association, finally clinching the title Friday night with a 145-141 victory over the Miami Floridians.

Actually the Rockets had clinched the title a few hours earlier when Washington was eliminated from the race by losing to the Pittsburgh Pipers 132-124. In the only other ABA game, the Carolina Cougars whipped the Indiana Pacers, 116-107.

Haywood, who leads the league in scoring and rebounding, scored 44 points to lead Denver over the Floridians. It marked one of the most amazing comebacks in pro basketball history as the Rockets came from last place midway in the season to take the title.

Helping the Denver cause was Larry Jones with 29 points and Jeff Congdon with 21. Don Freeman led Miami with 42 points and Don Sidle added 37.

Miami put a scare into the Rockets by taking a 34-29 lead at the end of the first period, but Haywood and Jones led Denver to a 65-59 halftime advantage.

Washington, the only team in the ABA with a chance of catching Denver, was eliminated by the Pipers in a penalty-plagued game that saw both coaches ejected for arguing with officials. Six technical fouls were called, and Washington coach Al Bianchi was thrown out 10 minutes into the first half and Pittsburgh coach Buddy Jeannette was ejected with 3:20 left in the game.

Rookie John Brisker sparked the Pipers with 45 points and Rick Barry paced Washington with 39 points. It was the Caps' first loss to Pittsburgh in six games this season.

A Franz Rambler Gremlin proves an economy drive can be fun, too!

Gremlin brings driving fun to the import field. Many economy imports are under-powered, sluggish, and difficult to control on the freeway. Not Gremlin. Gremlin has a standard 128 hp six to give it real zip. That makes it fun to operate. It's only 2½ inches longer than VW, so you thread through traffic with ease. And it's nearly 800 pounds heavier for stable freeway driving. Most fun of all is the price, an anti-inflationary.

Introducing A Used Car Guarantee . . .
It Doesn't Come With Every Car

It's a 100% guarantee. Not one of those "we-pay-half-you-pay-half" deals.

And it comes only with used cars that pass the Volkswagen 16 point Safety and Performance test.

OUR AFFILIATION WITH A TOP TRADING AREA ALLOWS US TO BRING TO ULSTER COUNTY A VERY HIGH CALIBRE BRAND OF MERCHANDISE AT THE LOWEST POSSIBLE PRICE.

We also guarantee it 100% repair or replacement of all major mechanical parts* for 30 days or 1,000 miles.

What kind of cars get our guarantee? All kinds. Chevys, Fords, Ramblers, VWs. (We get all kinds of trade-ins for new Volkswagens).

No. our used cars aren't "just like new." No used car can be. But no used cars could be in better shape, either.

Dear Abby

On American Indian

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
(© 1970 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: Thank goodness somebody finally gave the American Indian a little attention. If only to credit him with the distinction of keeping his hair long after other men have lost theirs. (Seldom does one ever see a bald Indian.)

Being a Cherokee, I can acquaint you with several other natural advantages we Indians have:

Our eyesight and hearing is superior to most white men's. And our sense of "smell" is extremely acute. (I can "smell" the presence of a poisonous snake at 40 paces.) I can also communicate with the jay bird, gray squirrel, and coyote in THEIR language — not mine. The white man has never been able to build a dwelling that compares with the "air-conditioned" teepee built by the Indian. Also, Indians have been preserving food for centuries, far superior to the dried, canned and frozen concentrates of the whites.

Another startling fact is that the Navajos have had very few unwanted babies. For centuries, the "juice" extracted from a certain plant has been used successfully for birth control.

And lest anyone tell you that we were "savages," I point out that scalping was introduced to the Indian by the FRENCH who wanted to exterminate the English. The French offered a bounty to the Mohawks for every Englishman they killed, and the "proof" was a scalp. And no white WOMAN was ever scalped by an Indian!

Happy hunting, Abby!

"CHEROKEE ERNIE"

DEAR ABBY: Perhaps the American Indians kept their hair because they knew how to take care of their bodies, and beautiful thick hair is healthy hair.

In this connection, American Indians have known for centuries that tobacco and alcohol were bad for their bodies, and self-respecting Indians smoked only two days a month under a full moon as a "religious rite," hence Indians did not poison themselves with tobacco.

Also, Indians would never eat anything that was decayed, spoiled or rotten. This included "fermented" fruit, from which alcohol was made. Generations of shunning anything fermented made the Indian tolerance for "alcohol" very low. That is why Indians cannot tolerate alcohol, and respectable Indians will not touch it.

Also, before Columbus landed here, the Indians were already doing dental work, comparable to that performed by the finest dentists in "civilized Europe."

I could write a book about how civilized the American Indian was. But nobody would believe it.

PROUD AMERICAN

DEAR ABBY: Your search for bald Indians was highly entertaining, and I congratulate you for having come up with some interesting facts about the American Indians. Here are a few more:

The average weekly wages of the black man in Watts is $64. The red man earns $30. Fifty per cent of all Indians children drop out of school before high school.

The infant death rate is 12 per cent higher among American Indians than the national average.

The Indian suicide percentage is the highest in the United States.

The average Indian is dead at age 43.

Maybe that's why you rarely see any bald Indians. Very truly yours,

VIRGINIA

DEAR ABBY: I don't know anything about bald Indians, but I am nearly 90 years old and I lived among Indians most of my life down here in Oklahoma. And I can tell you that if the white man's word was as good as the Indian's I have known, we would have a much better land.

Unlikely to Pass Senate Vote

Assembly Votes Jail Terms for Demonstrators

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI)—Over the objections of many of its members and a state commission, the Assembly has moved to slap stiff jail terms on campus demonstrators.

The larger house, rolling through a calendar of more than 300 bills in 10 hours while the Senate was approving abortion repeal Friday, approved, 95-43, a bill to require suspension of any student found guilty of an offense "intended to interfere with college activities."

The measure would apply to any college or university receiving state money—assuming it's passed by the Senate and signed by Governor Rockefeller, which seems unlikely in view of the report of the Temporary State Commission on Campus Unrest.

Assemblyman Albert J. Hausbeck, D-Buffalo, sponsor of the bill, said he thought it wouldn't apply to schools receiving loans from the state for dormitory construction, which would mean almost all the 215 institutions of higher learning in New York.

The unrest commission, after a year of study, recommended last month against any new legislation, stating that college administrators had given indications they could handle the situation.

Syracuse University vice president Kenneth G. Bartlett, a Republican Assemblyman, echoed the commission's report: "I think colleges are in a better position to decide the kinds of things they want to do to keep order," said Bartlett in voting against the bill.

However, both the Cornell University outbreaks of the week and the State University at Buffalo were mentioned in debate. Hausbeck said he introduced his bill at the request of taxpayers in his area after the late January unrest at Buffalo in which, he estimated, $250,000 damage was done.

Under the bill, a student, after being convicted in a court, would be suspended if a board of college deans found that the guilty charge stemmed from a campus disturbance.

The concept of a board consisting only of deans brought skepticism from Hausbeck's fellow Buffalo Democrat, Arthur O. Eve, who charged the bill would give radical students added ammunition for recruiting demonstrators.

Hausbeck said the committee of deans was included specifically "to keep it out of the hands of students."

Penalties under the bill ranged from suspensions of a minimum of one to five years, depending on the infraction. Other bills approved in the Assembly and sent to the Senate:

Pools—A bill providing "pool" coverage in slum and other high risk areas for persons wanting burglary and theft protection.

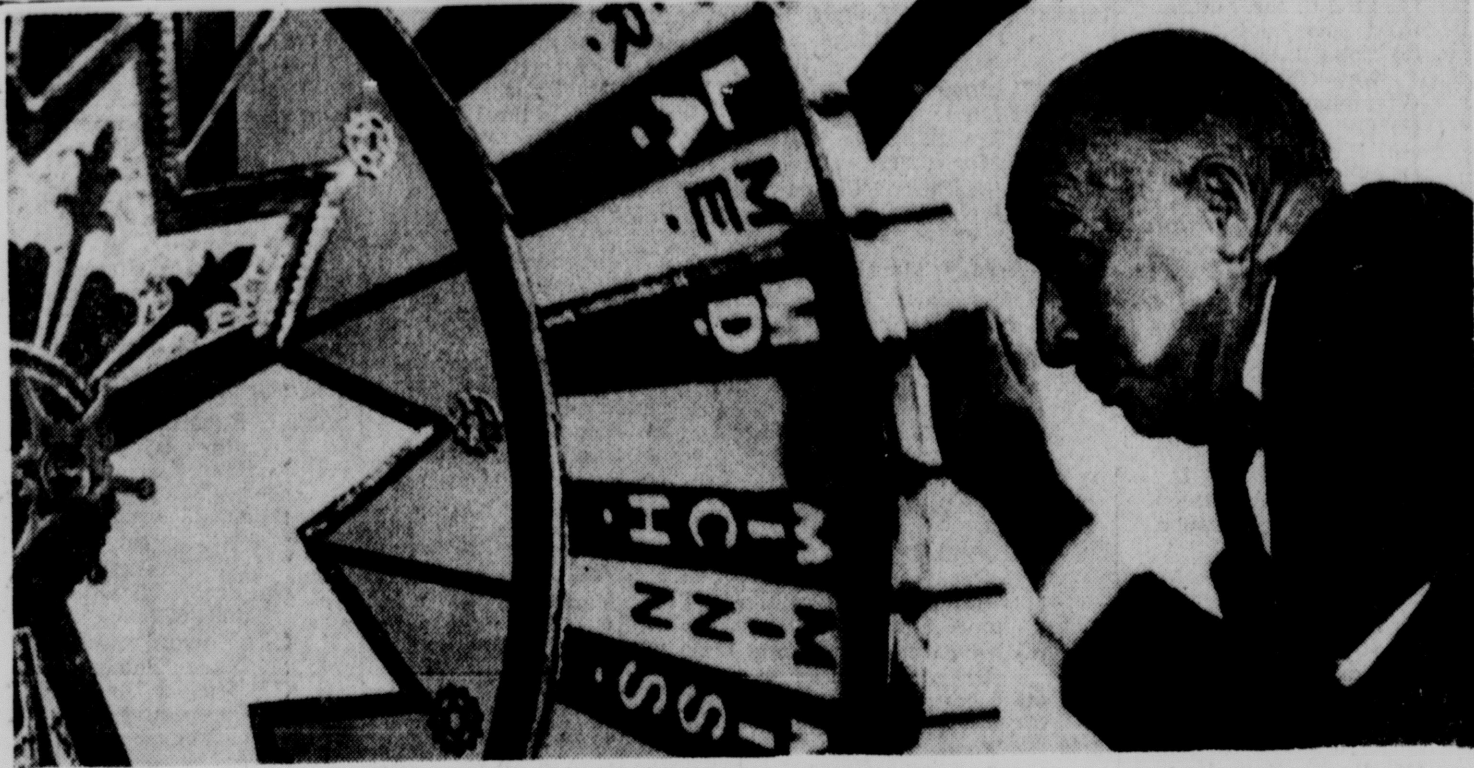

Census—School boards could, rather than making a house-to-house survey, count the number of children in their areas by asking parents when they enroll their child, make telephone calls, or use other methods.

Bombs—Conviction for placing an explosive device in a school or church would be punishable by up to 25 years in jail.

Bonds—Interest rates for public authority bonds would be increased from 6 to 8 per cent.

Rent—New York City apartments where rent hasn't been increased under rent control since 1953 would be subject to a 15 per cent increase.

Dorms—The State Dormitory Authority would have power to condemn property.

WHEEL OF CHANCE—Attorney General John Mitchell spins the wheel of chance to select the 1970 Cherry Blossom Queen at the Cherry Blossom Festival Ball. As he spun the wheel

Mitchell quipped, "If this works tonight, I have a very good idea how we're going to get the next Supreme Court nominee." (UPI TELEPHOTO)

GOP Leader Scorns Proposals For Supreme Court Nominations

WASHINGTON (AP)—The top Republican on the Senate Judiciary Committee has come out against proposals by some of his colleagues that President Nixon seek advance clearance from senators for a new Supreme Court nominee.

"Heavens, no," Sen. Roman L. Hruska of Nebraska said of the proposal advanced by some Republicans after Nixon's second high court nominee was rejected by the Senate.

He said this would be "mixing up the appointing power" and also would be impracticable.

"Who would you do it with?" he asked. "What senators?"

Several GOP senators suggested after the rejection of Judge G. Harrold Carswell's nomination Wednesday that Nixon should consult with them before he submits another name.

Nixon announced Thursday he would turn to a judge from another section of the country for his third choice. The Senate voted down his choice of Carswell, 51 to 45.

Nixon stirred up a political storm in the Senate by saying that, as now constituted, he had concluded it would not confirm a judge from the South who is a strict constructionist.

Senators in both parties hotly denied his charge of regional discrimination in the rejection of Judge Carswell, of Tallahassee, Fla., and Judge Clement F. Haynsworth Jr., Greenville, S.C.

Two resolutions challenging the regional discrimination charge were introduced in the Senate Friday. They were referred to the Judiciary Committee, where they are expected to die.

The first, offered by Sen. Albert Gore, D-Tenn., who voted against Carswell's and Haynsworth's nominations, declared the President's statement was "an assault on the integrity of the Senate."

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., introduced with other foes of the nominations a resolution to put the Senate on record as prepared to confirm a qualified nominee from any section of the country.

Meantime, Vice President Spiro T. Agnew said Carswell was defeated because "the Senate received the worst snow job of any legislative body in history."

The Vice President said of senators who opposed Carswell: "I assume they read the proliferation of material that descended on them each morning from the liberal media; and I think they were snowed, to use a common phrase."

He was interviewed Friday on the CBS "Evening News" program. As for Gore's resolution, he said, it "appears to be more a way to crawl out of a difficult situation than anything else... he should be in great trouble in Tennessee."

600 South Viet Relief Troops Reach Green Beret Campsite

Saigon (UPI)—Another relief column of 600 South Vietnamese troops reached the Green Beret camp at Dak Seang today, helicopters got in to evacuate the seriously wounded and six waves of B52 bombers tried to strike a death blow against the 10,000-man North Vietnamese encirclement.

Official spokesmen in Saigon took note of the day's developments and described the situation at the garrison as "very good... beautiful," after 11 days under shelling attack.

UPI Correspondent Barney Seibert reported from the highlands region that a battalion of government troops pushed into the outpost this morning, bolstering the number of allied soldiers involved in its defense to several thousand.

He said helicopters landing at the camp 292 miles northeast of Saigon at the Laotian border served to draw more mortar and rocket fire from North Vietnamese gunners who had spared the outpost from shelling during the night. No casualties were reported.

The copters brought out dozens of seriously wounded and 10 bodies. Allied losses in the past 11 days there have been 104 dead and 430 wounded, including 11 Americans killed and 43 hurt.

Brig. Gen. Lu Mong Lan, the South Vietnamese commander in the region, said 1,368 North Vietnamese troops have been killed around Dak Seang since April 1. He said 896 bodies were counted on the ground and 472 from the air.

Sgt. Daniel Noonan, 22, of Whittier, Calif., the camp's medic, came out on one of the evacuation copters and told Seibert, "I thought we would be overrun the first few days."

"We lost our radio the first day and the only communication we had for several days was with a small radio capable of contacting aircraft overhead. Later we got it repaired."

Among the 2,000 rounds that have fallen on the camp, he said, were at least six filled with nausea gas. Allied soldiers without gas masks used handkerchiefs soaked in urine to cover their faces to minimize its effects, Noonan said.

A battalion of Cambodian mercenaries led by Australian special forces soldiers drove through the encirclement to the camp Friday after three days of heavy hand-to-hand fighting en route. This helped take the pressure off the allied bastion.

The B52s, dropping up to 900 tons of bombs, were brought in this morning to try to break the encirclement for good. Their targets were described as Seang area claim more than 1,300 North Vietnamese weapons positions two miles east and nine miles southwest of Dak Seang.

Nixon Search for New Judge Centers in Maine, Minnesota

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Nixon's Northern search for a Supreme Court nominee is reported heading toward either a U.S. judge born and based in Maine or a federal appeals judge in Minnesota who has been a friend of Chief Justice Warren E. Burger since boyhood.

The names of federal Judges Edward T. Gignoux of Maine and Harry A. Blackmun of Minnesota as contenders for the high court seat surfaced Friday, but presidential press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said no decision had been made on a nominee.

Congressional sources said they understood the FBI was interviewing Maine residents who know Gignoux in a hunt for information about his background.

Blackmun checked into the private Cosmos Club here for an overnight stay shortly after Nixon announced Thursday he will look outside the South for his next nominee. Blackmun checked out Friday afternoon.

Rep. Clark MacGregor, R-Minn., renewed Friday the recommendation he made last December that Nixon nominate Blackmun.

Blackmun was not available for comment. Ziegler said several persons are being considered by the Justice Department. The department will submit its recommendation to the President, he added.

The Washington Evening Star on an "it-was-learned" basis, identified Gignoux and Blackmun as the two finalists, while The Los Angeles Times, quoting "the highest sources," called Blackmun the one.

Gignoux, 53, a native of Portland, Maine, has been U.S. district judge in Maine since 1957. Blackmun, 61, born in Nashville, Ill., has been a member of the 8th U.S. Court of Appeals at St. Louis since 1959. He was named to that court primarily on Burger's recommendation.

Kirk Shuns Lower Court In Desegregation Battle

TAMPA, Fla. (AP)—Again shunning a face-to-face meeting with a federal district judge, Claude Kirk sent two aides to a contempt hearing while he took Manatee County's school desegregation case directly to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Kirk, in seeking a hearing before the high court, said through his attorneys in Washington Friday that "there is grave danger of loss of life" if the turmoil in Manatee County continues.

The Republican governor contends his assumption of control over Manatee schools and their 17,000 pupils is a matter that can only be dealt with by the Supreme Court. He has twice with a federal district judge, defied U.S. District Judge Ben Gov. Claude Kirk sent two aides to a contempt hearing while he took Manatee County's school desegregation case directly to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Kirk, in seeking a hearing before the high court, said through his attorneys in Washington Friday that "there is grave danger of loss of life" if the turmoil in Manatee County continues.

The Republican governor contends his assumption of control over Manatee schools and their 17,000 pupils is a matter that

In tears, Hagaman, replied: "I'll have to stay with my governor."

Hoffman followed: "Yes, your honor, I feel emotionally the same as Hagaman does."

Asked the same question, Weitzenfeld replied he could uphold the order of the court but only until he "receives another order from the governor."

Kirk's tangle with the federal court began last Sunday when he suspended the Manatee school board and superintendent, blocking a planned transfer of 2,600 pupils, who would be bused to schools up to 12 miles from their homes.

Sheriff's deputies blocked the path of federal officials attempting to enter the Manatee school system's administration building Thursday. They also guarded a room occupied by Kirk's aides after the aides were arrested—but not physically interfering with the court order.

Former Florida Gov. Millard Caldwell represented Kirk in court Friday.

Judge Krentzman heard testimony without formally recognizing Kirk's absence. He did not rule on any of the contempt cases.

Can We Reclaim What We've Wrecked?

Give Earth a Chance!

It's an explosion! It's also the hottest growth stock on the amateur market today.

The sudden —almost overnight— increase of people who are becoming involved in conservation and environmental protests is staggering. "Kill the Hudson River Expressway," urges the Sierra Club. Prompted by rising concern over the deterioration of America's natural resources, citizens' groups and others are turning to the courts or to teach-ins about environmental evils in their efforts to stop the pollution of rivers, harbors, beaches and bays. The fight is on to bury smog and to prevent the loss of natural wilderness and historic areas to industry and highway construction.

Start with the concept that the Constitution guarantees citizens the right to a decent and healthy environment...and then cogitate on what man's drive for progress and profit has done to that concept.

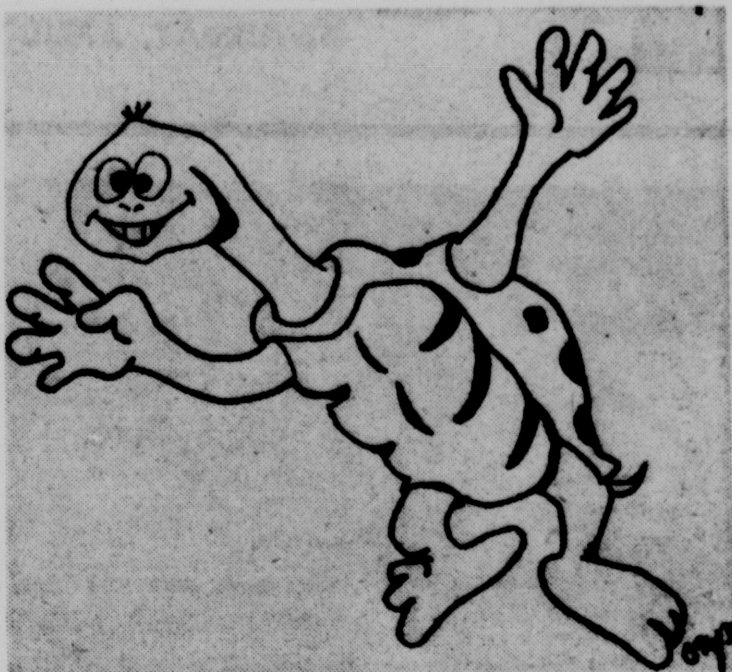

America the Unbeautiful

The foul smells from even one local pulp plant have aroused communities to outraged action against smoke and pollution. Protests against the smog that results from the internal combustion engine have sent ecology action groups into the street on stilts, bicycles, roller skates and pogo sticks to dramatize alternatives to the automobile. DDT and other pesticides are damned as poisoners of birds and fish, and clean air acts are being pushed to stop the killers. Personal and group crusades have been launched to save those symbols of the past, the elm trees. Against all odds, birds won out over a new jetport in Florida's Everglades National Park.

If it has all been somewhat removed from the Hudson Valley and the Catskill Mountains, it no longer is. The Environment Crusade will hit Ulster County like a battering ram on Earth Day, April 22, a day when the environmental teach-in for environmental action will come into its own.

On Earth Day on the New Paltz campus of SUNY, a giant, peaceful teach-in will publicize the ecology of wastes, celebrate loyalty to environment, and seek ways to reclaim what we have already wrecked.

That we have wrecked the Hudson and made of it something close to an open sewer is difficult to dispute.

Here's a turtle from the Long Island Expressway...
Who says his home has been covered with tar.
So I gave him a ride on the back of my suitcase;;;
And he wants to stay here in your yard...
Now at last his life won't be so hard.

(Cartoon and poem by New Paltz College student)

That the Esopus and the Sawkill have been damaged by detergents is a fact of life. That the waste-laden rain from smoke stacks befoils our mountain air is evident to every nose. That the building of an airport on Hurley Mountain would endanger the flora and fauna there and the corn crop in the Valley of the Rondout below cannot be relegated to the realm of fiction.

Testing the Violators

From the New Paltz campus, then, an invitation to the entire community to participate in the Earth Day teach-in. Open classes will be held at the college; seminars will cover water and air pollution, pesticides and resource conservation. Earth Day media projects are planned, books will be available, rivers and streams locally are being tested and the results will be publicized. Major and minor contributors to local pollution are being analyzed, and suggestions are needed for cures. Even the strong and polluting presence of individual rubbish burners and cigarette smokers is a target — and non-smokers are beginning to chide their friends to respect their right to cleaner air. Experimental gardens are being planted without chemicals and sprays. Posters are going up and the call to arms is: "Share Survival Information."

The college community at New Paltz is not alone in its belief that emphasis must be placed on the need for action in anti-pollution areas. Ecologists and other speakers will spend April 22 at Rondout Valley High School in another mammoth teach-in. Onteora High teachers are assigning relevant projects on pollution on Earth Day to their students. In Woodstock, a brand new ecology group named LIFE (Living in a Fulfilled Environment) will spend the week leading up to Earth Day in arranging window displays, mailing out leaflets and other environmental materials, and circulating petitions urging action to restore the town's Tannery Brook to its former healthy condition. Earth Day itself will bring a major teach-in under the sponsorship of LIFE with guest speakers and entertainment.

While Earth Day planners here and across the U.S. have stressed the non-controversial aim of their projects, the hue and cry has already gone up in some quarters that here is political activism in some insidious form. We think not; beg to differ most strongly insofar EARTH DAY CARTOON was drawn by a New Paltz College student to dramatize nationwide Environment Crusade later this month to emphasize the need for action against pollution. Preparations are afoot on New Paltz campus and in area high schools and communities to give ecology its due on April 22.

as our own local environment is concerned. It will take political activism to restore what city dwellers yearning for nature have destroyed in our countryside through lack of planning and arrogance. It will take political activism to reclaim what total ignorance has done to sap our vital ground water over the years, thus killing our design with nature. It will take political activism to keep our valleys forever open and our rolling countryside free from sprawl and helter-skelter destruction by subdividers and highway builders.

Another Brand Needed

That brand of activism that calls for selling brownies at an anti-war rally will hardly suffice. What might, however, is for those who care to join the nearest teach-in on Earth Day and begin to work to keep trees

Writes New Paltz collegian Ellen Whelan, in urging support of Earth Day on April 22:

"No matter where you wander,

No matter where you roam,

Some people think they've got the right

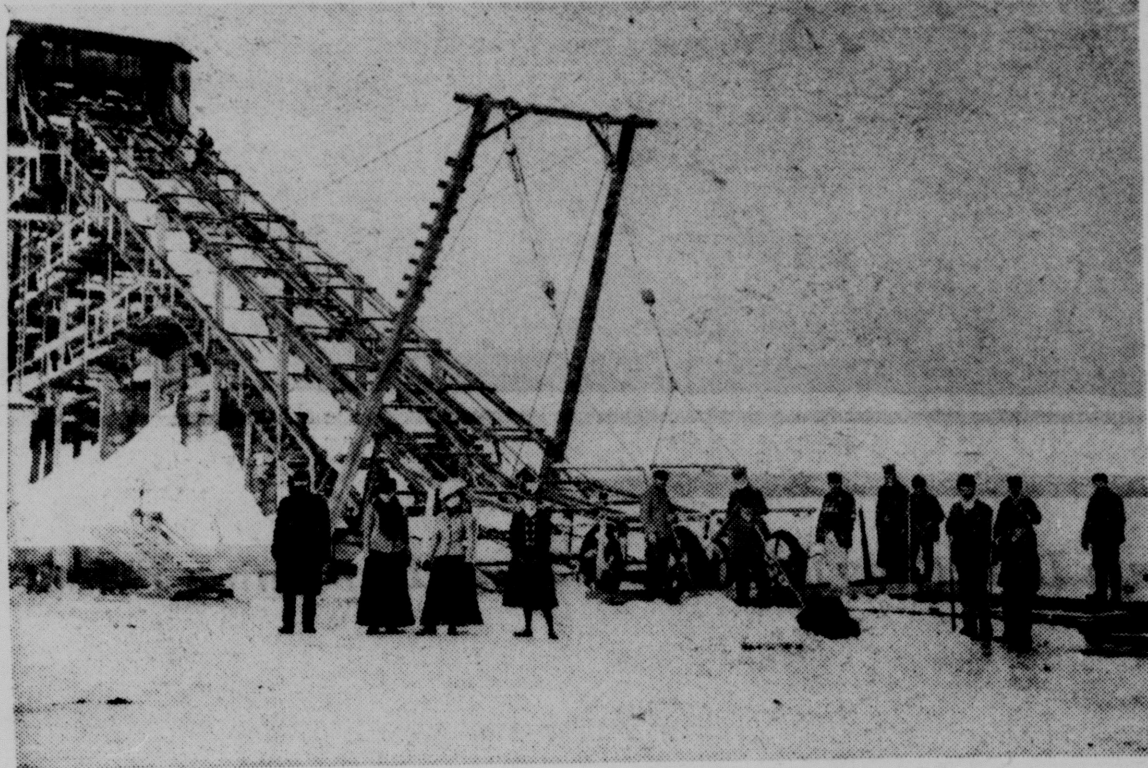

To claim what's free their own.

No matter where you visit,
No matter where your home,
The air that once was everyone's

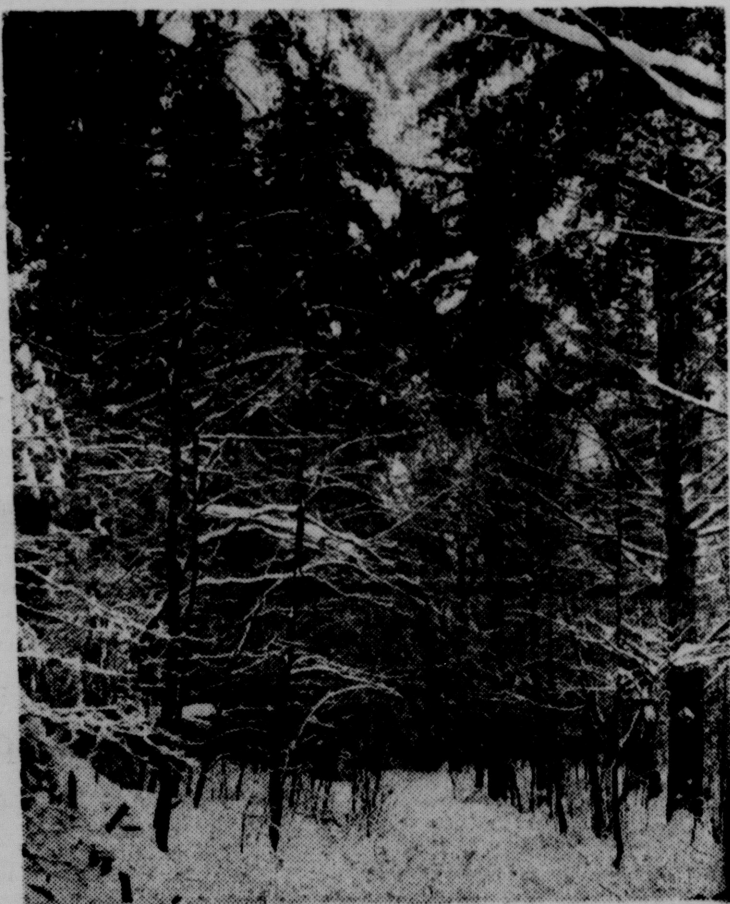

Is now a hazard zone."

Miss Whelan has gone to the core of the matter. Far too many Americans are ecological ignoramuses — and that state of mind bodes ill for the human future. For it is blank and sometimes even hostile toward the world on which man depends — the algae in the sea, the breathable air, the fish, the clean breeze.

Earth Day, with your active participation, could be a beginning that, hopefully, might change all that. (By TOBIE GEERTSEMA)

ONCE UPON A TIME, hundreds of men, boys and and horses worked from dawn till dark when the "Ice Harvest" was on in the winter. But that was when Hudson ice was pure and huge ice houses were spaced along both sides of the river. Gone from our polluted river today are the tall "frames" that lifted the ice to the conveyor, from which the cakes were layered with sawdust and hay to keep them from melting.

MAN'S RUSH TO PROGRESS has not laid its heavy hand on this abandoned woods road on Hurley Mountain for many decades. Returned to its wilderness beauty again, it could be desecrated anew—this time by airport runways rather than lumbermen—if local ecologists do not win their fight. (Freeman photo by Haines)

On Delaware's Banks A Recreational Boom

If you're already making plans for your vacation wanderings this year, you might consider a weekend trip — or even a longer sojourn — in the corner of New York State that borders Pennsylvania and New Jersey. Matter of fact, it's close enough to the Kingston area to consider visiting on even a one-day motoring trip.

If you go, you'll discover the spotless community of Port Jervis and its sparkling clean beach — no mean accomplishment in this age of pollution.

As you drive along, remember you're following the course of an old Indian trail to get there. That's because Port Jervis has been a trading center and natural crossroads for centuries. But the roads you travel will be a far cry from Indian trails. Modern Route 17, which passes within a few miles of Port Jervis links Ulster's southern tier and metropolitan New York. Almost completed is the multi-line Interstate Route 84 which will bi-sect the area and connect it with all major highways from

New England, mid-Atlantic and states further west.

Unspoiled Beauty

If you make this particular trip, you will be impressed with the unspoiled beauty of the area's land and water. Port Jervis sits on the banks of the Delaware River — the largest clean-water river in the east. There visitors can swim at the seven-acre municipal beach.

The beach is the first step in the Delaware Water Gap National Recreation Area, a site that will offer outdoor recreation in abundance to thousands upon its completion in 1977. Before decade's end, the Water Gap will boast a 37-mile-long man-made lake for fishing and water sports.

In the meantime, Port Jervis residents wouldn't live anywhere else; say their community is tops for leisure-time activities. Visitors, as well as natives, find that hunting, fishing, and golf rate with water sports in popularity. If you're the indoor rather than the outdoor type, there's a summer opera company based in the town; New York City's cultural attractions are one short hour away, and Monticello Raceway beckons harness-racing fans nearby.

If Port Jervis has earned kudos as a delightful vacation area, it has also received high praise for its industrial development. Its 9,200 citizens could be called ecology pioneers; have made every effort to attract only that type of industry they truly want.

Pride and Cooperation

Such pride has actually helped the local community, since there are some 30 diversified plants now in existence, and two industrial parks under construction. Area community colleges cooperate with local business to provide educational resources.

This kind of inspired planning, plus a firm determination to preserve the unspoiled beauty of the surroundings, makes Port Jervis an attractive place to visit. Some tourists have been so impressed, they've made it their permanent address.

If you've never been to this tri-state crossroads, do as the Indians did and visit the Orange County border city this year.

County Players Awards Banquet

Season after season, Dutchess residents have been entertained by the County Players, a non-profit theatrical group dedicated to the presentation of good theatre. Performances by the Players are entertainment highlights of any season.

So, too, is the annual Drama Awards program of the group. Established by County Players in 1967 to encourage and give recognition to talented high school drama students, the 1970 Drama Awards has 10 area high schools entering productions in competition.

All productions are being seen by a committee of judges. Among the plays already viewed or to be viewed: Beacon High's "Personal Appearance," "Our Town" by Lady of Lourdes; Highland's "Web of Murder," three one-act plays presented by Arlington High. Roosevelt High's "Oklahoma," "Brigadoon" by John Jay High Schools, Ket-cham High's production of "West Side Story," Oakwood's presentation of "J.B.," Cardinal Farley's "The Fantasticks," and Newburgh's "The Man Who Came to Dinner."

The County Players 1970 Drama Awards program will see awards in eight categories presented at a banquet set for The Covered Wagon on the night of June 5.

VIOLINIST JOSEPH FUCHS

A Mendelssohn Program By a Famed Violinist

A top quality season has been the aim of the Hudson Valley Philharmonic... and a top quality season it's been. Concerts by the fabulous Eileen Farrell, the talented John Browning, and the ever popular Skitch Henderson have come and gone since the season began last October.

Now the final concert looms, and it should close out the season spectacularly. For the guest artist is famed violinist Joseph Fuchs, who will perform the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto with the Hudson Valley Philharmonic Orchestra. The closing concert is scheduled for this coming Monday, April 13, 8:30 p.m. on the stage of Kingston's Community Theatre.

Also on the program for the evening will be the Tchaikovsky Fourth Symphony and the premiere of a new work by Richard Wilson. These will be played by the orchestra under the direction of Claude Monteux, returning to his podium after a five-week solo tour of Europe.

A World Premiere.

Wilson, whose composition will be given its world premiere by the area Philharmonic, is assistant professor of music at Poughkeepsie's Vassar College. He leaves shortly for Europe on a Vassar Faculty Fellowship.

a study program funded by the Ford Foundation.

Wilson has been at Vassar since 1968; was honored by the Composers' Forum with a new York City recital of his work in late 1969. His music has also been performed at Carnegie Hall and Buffalo State University College. A native of Ohio, he is a magna cum laude graduate of Harvard University; earned his master's degree in music composition at Rutgers University.

Prior to appearing in Kingston Monday night, Fuchs and the area Philharmonic will present the same program at Newburgh Free Academy tonight, and at Poughkeepsie High School Sunday night.

Friday, April 17

NET PLAYHOUSE (Channels 13 & 17, 8:30 p.m.). A distinguished list of performers appears in "They," adapted from the acclaimed novel of the same title by Marya Mannes. How Great One Did It

While the familiar, jovial face hasn't changed, millions of television viewers now see a new man. The Great One did it! Jackie Gleason shed 60 pounds and 12 inches from his waistline! Which all goes to prove that anyone can lose weight, if he wants to.

PAGEANT Magazine spoke with Dr. Bernard Halperin of Miami, Florida, the man who guided Jackie through his reducing program, and asked him how this famous entertainer (who had tried many diets that all resulted in failure in the past), finally succeeded. Dr.

Halperin explained, "When Jackie came to me to put him on a diet, he was ready—both emotionally and physically. I believe that when you make up your mind to lose weight, you'll lose it. But you have to be motivated. That's the secret."

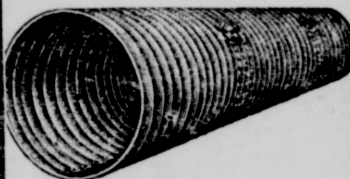

The doctor must be right. No appetite depressors were prescribed — just a fantastic diet combined with exercise and plenty of will power. When asked how he stuck to his regimen, the comedian replied, "Down a couple of martinis and an onion looks like a 7-course dinner!"

The PAGEANT article includes for the curious (or the overweight), the complete Gleason drink-along, waist-away superdiet which allows for plenty of meats and martinis and never runs more than 1500 calories a day — sure to please even the hungriest dieters.

A Papa's First

The Renault 10 Sierra, your first Ferrari.

Sure, the Renault 10 Sierra isn't quite a Ferrari. (It costs under $1900.) But it is a first step in the right direction.

With black vinyl panels on the hood and on both sides. Chrome vent shades. "Bikini" seat covers (front only). Chrome hood latches.

Plus, (for a few extra dollars) racing wheels and tires. And an exhaust system with a flare all its own.

And, its independent suspension, synchromesh transmission and four disc brakes deliver the kind of handling you won't find in some sports models that cost a lot more.

So, come on down and test drive the Renault 10 Sierra. You just might want to make it your first Ferrari.

JON VOIGHT and DUSTIN HOFFMAN attract stares from patrons in a Times Square diner in scene from "Midnight Cowboy," a smash hit, the film is now playing at Kingston's Mayfair Theater.

THE UNION PACIFIC FLYER gets held up again and again in "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid," the story of two famous outlaws, played by Paul Newman and Robert Redford. It's teamed on a double bill with "The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie," featuring Maggie Smith as an unconventional school mistress, at the just reopened 9-W Drive-In here.

Midnight Cowboy

This is the stuff of which smash hits are made! The freshest-looking film to come along in years, "Midnight Cowboy" manages to be splashy but sensitive. And Manages further to alternate between hilarity and sadness.

Totally memorable performances are given by John Voight and Dustin Hoffman as loners and hustlers in New York City. The film is an excellent study of the gap between the glittering dream and reality. To all this, add fine supporting performances, excellent use of score, and over-all, exciting direction by John Schlesinger, who catches the mood of Manhattan for losers, and utilizes to the hilt the power of film to dazzle the eye and strike at the nerve centers. In addition to the two excellent portrayals by the stars, outstanding character parts are contributed by Sylvia Miles, John McGiver, Brenda Vaccaro, and Bernard Hughes.

A brilliant movie in breathtaking color, "Cowboy" probes as no film ever has the lower depths and heartbreaking loneliness of one segment of society. As a clear-eyed view of depravity, the movie distinguishes itself — but it is Dustin Hoffman and Jon Voight who make the film powerful and unforgettable as lonely misfits who find an existence in caring by discovering and losing love. See it by all means, with our highest recommendation, at Kingston's Mayfair Theater currently.

John and Mary

And it's Dustin Hoffman again — competing with himself on two separate Kingston screens this week. But gone is the whining, limping "Ratso" he plays in "Midnight Cowboy" . . . to be replaced with the very apparent Hoffman charm on view in the role of a young furniture designer in "John and Mary," now showing at the Community here.

The picture definitely has merit — mostly because of Hoffman — but its plot offers very little that is new, now that words like "virgin" and "free love" no longer shock. And now that words like "singles" and "pad" and "cool" have become all too familiar.

It seems to us we've seen it all before. A couple of singles (Dusty and Mia Farrow) meet in a singles hangout, ever so casually spend the night in his apartment — and then spend a day together and then go to bed again. There's a really "now" scene in which — after all that — they finally get around to exchanging names . . . and it's left up to your imagination whether they'll go their separate ways at movie's end . . . or wind up happily married.

Nothing new and nothing too great, but Hoffman again proves his considerable acting talent, and there is some sense of mutual discovery and of today's youth in the film.

Cactus Flower

Definitely a winner is this comedy, marking Ingrid blooming femme fatale when he persuades her to impersonate his non-existent wife to satisfy Goldie's demand to meet her lover's mate.

"Flower's" subject is sex and its plot is a multitude of complications and coincidences. Which serves to make it a warm sentimental comedy, done from a bawdy point of view. A typical punch line: Jack Weston, playing Ingrid's lover for Goldie's benefit, to Miss Bergman — "In the office, you look like a big band aid."

Hamlet

More's the pity that the new film adaptation of "Hamlet" will have only a brief two-day run at Catskill's Community Theatre next week. But, by all means, try to see it while it's there on Wednesday and Thursday, April 15 and 16.

For it is one of the finest Hamlets ever done, and the role of the Danish prince, as played by Nicol Williamson is unique and electrifying. Williamson repeats his performance as "Hamlet" in London and on Broadway, which skyrocketed him to international fame.

Fresh, brisk and beautiful, the film is filled with exciting action. Updated for today's viewers, in much the same way as the recent film version of "Romeo and Juliet," this movie has vast appeal for long-time lovers of Shakespeare, as well as teenagers of 1970. For Williamson interprets Hamlet as a contemporary man in agonized opposition to a solid Establishment and the film is unlike any Hamlet ever seen before.

They Shoot Horses, Don't They?

Held over for a third, triumphant week at the Orpheum Theater in Saugerties is this film that focuses on the sagging dancers of those Depression days marathons. The movie reminds us that, while they lasted, the dingy and inhumanly cruel marathons were such a profitable part of show business that literally millions of Americans flocked to them during their peak years in the '30s.

It's a memorable movie focusing on personal defeat and the misery of life. And it is compelling in its recreation in harrowing and gripping detail of one of the most bizarre periods in U.S. history. The viewer is caught up in the ruthless and relentless marathon where the poor and the hungry compete at a painful pace in a garish and grueling — but always (Continued on Page 30)

Movies

Bergman's return to Hollywood, and featured currently at Woodstock's Tinker Street Cinema. Perfect casting makes it a very funny farce.

Goldie Hawn is totally lovable as a pert Greenwich Villager; Walter Matthau is marvelous as her lover, a Fifth Avenue dentist. Rick Lenz is most attractive as the struggling young writer who lives next door to Goldie, and Ingrid Bergman is as professional as ever and almost as attractive as in her heyday as Mattahu's straitlaced nurse who emerges as a late the just reopened outdoor theater in Kingston. Topping the double bill is "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid," with Paul Newman and Robert Redford playing the title roles in a memorable tale of two legendary outlaws who take the ways of the Old West to Bolivia. Imaginative direction, fine performances, and a sense of humor enliven this highly entertaining western.

Sharing the screen with Butch and Sundance is "The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie," with Maggie Smith as an unconventional Scottish school mistress who sways her class of impressionable girls with her own distorted, romantic views of reality. A glowing portrayal by Miss Smith and a superbly gifted supporting cast.

HYDE PARK DRIVE-IN. Currently coupled on the double bill are "Tell Them Willie Boy Is Here" and "Change of Habit." "Willie" takes place in the early 1900's, when Willie Boy, a California Indian, pursued by a posse for a killing in self defense, wins the respect and sympathy of a rugged young sheriff who leads the pursuit. Robert Redford is the sheriff and Robert Blake is Willie.

"Change of Habit" has to do with three young Catholic nuns who are permitted to conceal their religious identity, and discard their habits for contemporary dress for two months' work in a big city ghetto. Mary Tyler Moore is one of the girls who goes to work as a speech therapist assistant to (get this!) Elvis Presley as a dedicated young doctor.

OVERLOOK DRIVE-IN. On Poughkeepsie's outdoor screen, the double bill of "Topaz" and "Winning." The first is another dandy thriller from Alfred Hitchcock, starring John Forsythe in the film version of Leon Uris' best-selling novel of the same name about the Cuban missile crisis. The second has Paul Newman and Joanne Woodward as a racing car champion and his wife. Their marriage is almost wrecked in his concentration on winning the big race as he competes in the Indianapolis 500. (By TOBIE GEERTSEMA)

The Artist as a Vigorous Draftsman

ROBERT ANGELOCH

BRUCE CURRIE

RUTH MUROFF

EDWARD CHAVEZ

EDWARD MILLMAN

An exhibition that will make viewers aware of the artist as a creative and vigorous draftsman — coupled with a gala Open House where they can Meet-the-Artists... and a major, special event in the form of a lecture by a famed Guyanese visitor.

That's the promise of a tripe threat presentation on the Ulster County Community College campus this month. First in line is a show featuring selected drawings by 20 noted American artists. The works, under the title of "Artist As Draftsman," are on view in the Stone Ridge college's Visual Arts Gallery for a long stand run from now through May 8. Again, the display is part of the Art Series of UCCC's Department of Visual Arts; has the aim of bringing varied art experiences to students, faculty, administration and community at large.

Keynote of the show is the interpretation of their world by U.S. artists through drawings. The work on display represents a variety of styles and techniques, both abstract and naturalistic, in pastels, pen and ink, charcoal, wash and crayon.

A Major Art Form

Drawing, of course, is a one of the oldest modes of artist expression; one of the independent major art forms. Rife with imagination and creativity, the drawings in this UCCC show are notable for their expression of deep and poetic emotion through perception and vision.

Says Professor Ruth Muroff, chairman of the Department of Visual Arts: "These drawings mirror the spirit; are the language of the soul. They have the facility of making perceptible that which is intellectual; of embodying that which is spirit; and of bringing to light without distorting that which is invisible."

Artists represented in the April-May show include: Robert Angeloch, Jane Axel, Hannelore Baron, Edward Chavez, Richard Crist, Bruce Currie, Ruth Gikow, Marion Greenwood, Jack Levine, and Ethel Magafan. Other talents of note are: Jenne Magafan, Edward Millman, Ruth Muroff, Barbara Neustadt, Anton Refregier, Andree Ruellan, Bernard Steffen, Nancy Summers, John Taylor, and Emmanuel Viviano.

Open House Gala

After viewing this wealth of work, the public will have an opportunity to Meet-the-Artists at a special Open House on Sunday, April 26 in the Visual Arts Gallery on the Stone Ridge campus. An extra-added attraction of this gala event will be the chance to take home free an original block print poster specially designed for the exhibit by internationally known artist, Anton Refregier. A limited number of the poster prints — on handmade Fabriano paper and signed by Refregier — will be presented free to those attending the Meet-the-Artists reception at Open House on Sunday, April 26 from 2 to 5 p.m. in the Visual Arts Gallery.

The third part of the April-May program on campus will take the form of a special event, sponsored by the Department of Visual Arts in conjunction with the exhibit, and featuring a lecture by the renowned Guyanese artists, Frank Bowling. The celebrated guest speaker will discuss "Black Art — A Shift in Perspective" on Tuesday, April 14 at 1:40 p.m. in lecture hall 420 of the college. Both the lecture and the reception which follows are open to the public.

All in all, an auspicious month for art at UCCC as the Artist as Draftsman takes over to give meaning to Plato's philosophy that "Time is the moving image of eternity."

60 Films Released

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Warner Bros. has released 60 major rerun feature films for television, including "Blood Alley," "East of Eden," "The Searchers," "Rebel Without a Cause," "Mister Roberts" and "A Star is Born."

Rock for 'Dolls'

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The hard rock group, The Strawberry Alarm Clock, will provide the music for "Beyond the Valley of the Dolls" at 20th Century-Fox.

Artist as Seminarist On Black Creativity

His most recent one-man show in New York at the Dintenfuss Gallery had the art critics looking through their copies of Roget for new adjectives. Reviewers as well as viewers were intrigued by his works, which utilized existing schema in his ghostly-traces of an edifice, representing his ancestral home, silhouetted maps of South America.

He is Frank Bowling, who sets his bare outlines of buildings and places in operation on a field of saturated color. And whose references to locale are subtly de-emphasized to fuse with the formal scheme and sensation of environmental color in his art.

Bowling, an internationally prominent artist-teacher, has also published numerous articles on art and is in the process of writing a book on the history of black art.

Guest Lecturer

Now, the young Guyanan artist turned American resident, is slated as a guest speaker at Ulster County Community College. The Department of Visual Arts on campus is presenting him in a Meet-the-Artist lecture Tuesday, April 14, 1:30 p.m. in Lecture Hall 420 at the Stone Ridge college. Both the lecture and the reception which will follow in the Visual Arts Gallery are open to the public.

Bowling, who studied at London's Chelsea School of Art, Slade School of Fine Art, and the Royal College of Art, will take as his topic: "Black Art — A Shift in Perspective." For listeners, whether students, faculty or area residents, the program offers an opportunity to participate in a lively and significant seminar of ideas on art and the black artist, one of the challenges of today's world.

Professor Ruth Muroff, chairman of the Department of Visual Arts, is bringing this noted artist to UCCC in an effort to enrich the audience's awareness of the achievements of the artist, his artistic problems and personal energies. As an adjunct to the lecture, the public is invited to view the campus exhibit of drawings by 20 U.S. artists, stressing draftsmanship, now on display in the campus gallery.

POTPOURRI

By JOAN WOINOSKI

It was rather like erasing a face-full of freckles to find a vacant seat last Saturday night at Benedictine Hospital Auxiliary's "Zizanie," in Governor Clinton Hotel.

'Twas a "400" gala for sure with well over 400 socialites jamming crystal room, capitol room, sunporch, and garden lounge for filet mignon dinner, while Duke Locke tended special - for - the - occasion bar in hotel lobby. Anyone without confirmed reservation couldn't have machined-gunned his way in.

There was an exchange of good vibrations between Pete Ferraro's Orchestra and elegant overflow who were dancing like there was no tomorrow — only thing missing from Lawrence Welk-type gala was bubbles. And it was the kind of posh crowd one delights bumpin' into; let's face it, who'd mind being jostled a bit by gentlemen like Frank Grimaldi, Anthony Triulzi, Dr. John Cooke, Hamilton Fish Jr., H. Clark Bell?

Zizanie's defined as "medical profession's dream of perfect health and well being" — yet, for every doctor on-the-spot there was a funeral director. (However, it did put everyone at ease just knowing if he partied too hard he'd be taken care of one-way-or-the-other.) Frank Simpson expertly guided Julie around the bevy of belles; Dr. George Einterz was a picture of husband bursting with pride of his mate; Henry Bruck and his new bride two-stepped with professional ease; Dr. and Mrs. Vincent Amatrano wine and dined in concert; and Jim Gilpatric was affectionately back-slapping friends, one of whom was overheard to say, "Somehow I get the feelin' he's sizing me up."

The last time we saw hotel so prettied up was Kingston Hospital Auxiliary dance; evidently, when it comes to super-smash decor, those who are used to Shhhh! Quiet. Please atmosphere, really produce (or should we say operate). At any rate, the rooms blossomed Saturday night with tree upon tree of huge pink and white magnolia blooms and delicate dogwood... all credited to Mrs. James R. (Fleurette) Myers.

Police Chief Francis Fagan had advantage over most — being six-feet-plus he could stand in one spot and take in happenings of all four rooms simultaneously. Wonder if he overheard that well known Kingstonian who kept inventing friend after friend as excuse for "just one more toast." Ah, friendship, how sweet it is!

Visiting bowlers returning to hotel via sunporch must have been impressed by ultra chic affair and by such local pulchritude as Mrs. J. Collins Troy, Mrs. William "Tildie" Davenport, Kay Gaffken, Kay Gilligan, to name a few. Undoubtedly, the most "formal" formal in many an era, dressing for Zizanie was a cultural art and Rosemary Grimaldi's full length satin-like sheath and Mrs. Bernie Feeney's pastel pink chiffon must be considered masterpieces.

There are parties and there are parties but this soiree was a little like the ballroom scene from My Fair Lady. Bravos to Joy Bell and committee for the gala that'll make Zizanie a household word for many moons to come.

Papyrus to Microfilm

"special" often function as public institutions via interlibrary loan and open registration.

Beehives of Activity

Today's libraries are hardly the musty old storehouses of books once beloved of novelists and screen writers. If the building is turn of the century Carnegie outside, its inside is a beehive of activity in 1970. Books line the shelves as always, but today's reader not only thumbs through the covers, he utilizes microfilms, phonograph records, art prints, magazines, filmstrips, slides and film. Multi-media is a highlight of many school libraries, and public libraries have gone into a wide range of programs from art exhibits and lectures by authors to Great Books discussions, children's programs and educational displays.

It's fitting and proper that libraries should have a National Week of their own. Where else, pray tell us, could a housewife find the name of the president of the company from whence her faculty dryer came? What other recourse for the man who wants to trace his family back to its origin in Ulster County? How to properly address a U.S. Senator? How to unearth the information of how many New York State cities can claim a 25,000 population? Where to find literary criticism of Papa Hemingway's works? Where to discover Civil War battle maps?

For Ulsterites who would trace a family tree, research a paper, do a homework assignment, or just relax over a book meant for leisurely reading, the local climate is excellent. In the area bounded by Olive, Woodstock, Stone Ridge, Rosendale, Port Ewen and Kingston alone, there are 10 libraries. And as members of the Mid-Hudson System they have access to the wealth of books and other services available via inter-library loan from 59 libraries in five counties.

The Kingston Area Library is the oldest locally; was established in 1899. Stone Ridge began operation in 1909 and Woodstock a decade later. Attesting to the diversity of physical structure, Kingston's is housed in a Carnegie building dating from 1904; Woodstock's is in a converted house; Olive's in a former schoolhouse. Kingston's was recently rewired and newly roofed, and a revision of the card catalog and refurbishing via repairs and painting is on the immediate agenda. Woodstock recently built a new addition and Olive will soon have a completely new building.

More Than a Storehouse

During National Library Week, area buildings and their staffs come to the fore. Through the stresses and uncertainties of life today, the library is not only a storehouse of history, but also a center for topical information; a place where all sides of a question can be explored and an answer found. No longer are libraries the sole domain of the Roman emperor or his equivalent. They belong to the average citizen, who has learned to use them for reading, exploring history, and getting practical answers to his questions.

And, during National Library Week, remember, too, that libraries have financial needs; to support buildings, pay staffs, combat inflation, make up the 60 per cent increase in the average cost of a book in the past 10 years, buy films, and assure library personnel a living wage. Support your library through donations, paid memberships, book sales, fairs, dinners and other fund raising ventures—and you will be repaid a hundred times over in service.
